French Fear Nazi Threat To Czechs in War Games

Paris Sees Intimidation in Row on Sudeten Minority Question.

Reich Army Held To Be Million Men

Huge Maneuvers Will Boost Military Units to Wartime Basis.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Aug. 12.—Top-speed preparations for Nation-wide military maneuvers are hoisting Germany's armed forces to a new war-time basis and alarming the French government.

The regular army, already capable of full force action overnight without the necessity of old-time mobilization, will take the field next month with new divisions of reserves for the first such joint training since the World War. Germany generally is credtied with having an armed force of 1,000,000 men.

The reserves have been ordered to report next Monday. According to military experts, they will be drawn from the volunteer classes of 1934, 1935 and 1936 and classes released last fall. Only parts of these classes will be drawn, it was said.

World War veterans (Landwehr units) between the ages of 35 and 45 also may participate.

See "Intimidation."

France today sought information on intentions through French diplomatic representatives abroad. Reports that Hitler's army had requisitioned vehicles and speeded up construction of fortifications on her French and Polish frontiers led France to fear the Nazis were greasing their war machine for use in case they failed to receive quick satisfaction from Czechoslovakia in the dispute over the future status of that country's 3,500,000 Sudeten German minority.

French foreign office circles voiced a belief that the preparations were designed to intimidate Czechoslovakia, France and Britain, and watched carefully the advices from French diplomatic and secret agents in Germany.

The German maneuvers will be held sectionally, rather than as one huge demonstration of military prowess.

Reich Army Is Full Strength.

The military magazine Deutsche Wehr (German Defense) said Germany had neglected the reservist phase of military preparedness since rearmament, contrary to the practice of other nations.

The step emphasized one of the fundamental differences between the German army and those of other European nations, such as France and Italy.

Germany's regular army, observers said, was kept at war strength in peace—every company of 170 men has had its full quota constantly.

In France, on the other hand, company units are not kept filled, although at full strength they would have 170 men. Thus, in France calling the reserves merely means filling the ranks of regular army companies.

Citizens Must Co-operate.

In Germany it will mean placing entire divisions of reserves in the field, in addition to regular army divisions.

The two weeks following next Monday, it is believed in military circles, will be devoted to organization of the reserves into units and fundamental training so that by September 1 the joint regular-reserve maneuvers can begin to hit their stride, with a peak in the operations expected to come between September 9 and 14.

Carroll Given Life For Slaying Doctor

Daughter He Ruined Sees Movie as Ex-Deputy Hears Sentence.

By the United Press.

South Paris, Me., Aug. 12.—Former Deputy Sheriff Francis M. Carroll, onetime scoutmaster and church worker, was convicted tonight of slaying a country doctor and was sentenced immediately to life imprisonment.

The jury, which took the case at 2:15 (E. S. T.), returned its verdict at 7:50 p. m. The verdict carried with it a mandatory life sentence with no parole.

His daughter's sweetheart, 19-year-old Paul N. Dwyer, is now serving a life sentence for the crime.

Carroll showed no emotion as he heard the verdict, but his wife, sitting only 10 feet away in the spectators' section, dabbed at her eyes and shook her head as if in disbelief.

Barbara Absent.

The defendant's pretty 18-year-old daughter, Barbara Carroll, whose romance with her father's accuser, Paul Dwyer, allegedly motivated the slaying, was not in the courtroom.

The jury took "several ballots," but one member said that the exact number taken before Carroll was found guilty of murdering Dr. Littlefield would never be divulged.

The conviction may mean a pardon for Dwyer, who pleaded guilty last December 2. He testified at Carroll's trial that the former deputy sheriff intimidated him into confessing.

After the jury returned its ver-

"The only thing I can say, sir," the husky defendant declared, "is I am not guilty."

Superior Judge William H. Fisher then handed a paper to Court Clerk Rupert Aldrich and the clerk read: "I hereby sentence you to hard

Dies Reveals U.S. Nazi Plot For Sabotage

Half-Million Members of Bunds Claimed in This Country.

By the Associated Press.

An undercover agent told the House Committee on "Un-American Activities" yesterday that the Nazi movement in the United States aims to set up a "vast spy network" and "powerful sabotage machine" for use in case of war.

These charges came from John C. Metcalfe, committee investigator and former Chicago newspaperman, whose short stature, small black mustache and crisp tone reminded spectators of Adolf Hitler.

Metcalfe, a native of Germany, who came to this country in 1914, told of joinng the German-American bund under a German name, and becoming a trusted lieutenant of Fritz Kuhn, national bund leader.

Had Luther Removed.

He quoted Kuhn as saying he had Dr. Hans Luther, long-time German Ambassador to the United States, removed from his post for failure to co-operate completely with secret German-American bund activities.

"I have secret relations with Germany whereby I can get anything I want," Kuhn said, according to Metcalfe.

Under questioning of Chairman Dies (Democrat), Texas, Metcalfe estimated that "at least half a million persons in this country" are members, supporters, or sympathizers with the Nazi movement.

Among scores of photographs offered the committee was one portraying Kuhn, leader of the bund, meeting Hitler in Germany in 1936.

Metcalfe charged that when the House committee was appointed Kuhn ordered bunds in this country to destroy all correspondence that might appear suspicious.

This was corroborated by Peter Gissibl, head of the Chicago bund, who testified he had resigned after sharp differences with Kuhn over certain policies.

Gissibl, speaking slowly with a German accent, at one point indicated he feared harm because of his testimony, but Chairman Dies promised him protection.

The former Chicago bund leader said he opposed Kuhn on hatred of Jews, uniforms for children similar to those of the Hitler youth movement, and a close tie between the bund in this country and Nazi Germany.

Metcalfe said the foreign institute of Nazi Germany (the Auslands bureau at Stuttgart), was chief of-

U. S. Survey Rates South Poorest Area

States Called Untapped 'Treasure Trove' of Soil and Labor.

But Purchasing Power Is Far Too Low, Says NEC's Report.

(Sumary of Report, Page 24.)

By the United Press.

The National Emergency Council last night submitted a long-awaited report to President Roosevelt describing the Southern States as a vast, underprivileged section where relatively poor wage, health, housing, credit and educational facilities prevail

The 60-page survey, prepared by Southern officials in the Federal Government with the aid of an advisory committee of 22 Southern educators, executives, planters and professional men, made no remedial recommendations.

The report came on the heels of a personal declaration Thursday by President Roosevelt at Athens, Ga., that purchasing power must be raised in areas where it was too low. Mr. Roosevelt himself ordered the NEC to undertake the survey, after characterizing the South as "our No. 1 economic problem." The "non-partisan" investigators stated that the South is a treasure-trove of soil, water and population resources, but has failed to achieve the level of purchasing power, credit and living standards to which it is entitled.

Cotton Not Enough.

The report indicated that over-dependence on cotton as a cash crop was largely responsible for the South's economic dilemma.

"No other similar area in the world gambles its welfare and the destinies of so many people on a single crop market year after year," the report says, adding:

"The gamble is not a good one. Few other crops are subject to such violent and unpredictable price variations as cotton."

Other revelations:

In the search for jobs, southerners in the prime of life leave the South in the greatest numbers, tending to make it a land of the very old and the very young.

Average Income $314.

The average income in the South in 1937 was $314, compared to $604 in the rest of the country.

The richest State in the South ranks lower in per capita income than the poorest State in other regions.

The assessed value of taxable property in the South in 1935 averaged only $463 per person, while in the Northeastern States it averaged $1,370.

Social Security Speech Follows George 'Purge'

President to Make 15-Minute Broadcast to Nation Monday.

May Ask Broader Application of Act

Chief Executive Holds Cabinet Session on His Return.

An Editorial—Page 6.

By William V. Nessly.

President Roosevelt will address the Nation Monday night in a 15-minute radio broadcast, the White House announced yesterday.

The talk will mark the third anniversary of the social security act, keystone in Mr. Roosevelt's program of social reform, a program for whose continuance and expansion he is now engaged in a determined fight with conservative legislators of his own party.

The President returned yesterday to a capital startled by the vehemence with which he had sought, the day before, to end the senatorial career of Walter F. George, veteran Georgia member of the Senate, and wondering how widely he intended to extend the drive on those Democrats in Congress who had voted against him on important issues.

Has a Busy Day.

Fresh from a five-week tour across the country and cruise into the Pacific and through the Panama Canal, the Chief Executive plunged into a busy day immediately upon arrival at the Executive Offices yesterday morning.

He had talks with Secretary of State Hull and Undersecretary Welles, presumably on foreign affairs, and Secretary of Agriculture Wallace and then met the cabinet in a protracted regular Friday session. In addition to members of his official family, he conferred with Senator Harrison (Democrat), of Mississippi, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, who clashed with the President at the last session over repeal of the undivided surplus tax.

Crop Solution Sought.

Secretary Wallace said after the Cabinet meeting that plans had been discussed to bring about adjustments to meet complaints by south Georgia tobacco planters against allotments given them under the crop control act. The AAA has fixed the Georgia tobacco quota at 76,000,000 pounds, and a crop of 90,000,000 pounds has resulted from a favorable growing season. Secretary Wallace said it was believed the law would permit a leeway for adjustments to the large growers hardest hit.

Senator Harrison, who is not a candidate for re-election this year, would say only that in his White House talk he had discussed with the President a $26,000,000 PWA road program in Mississippi.

Harrison, one of the Democratic conservatives who have been in sharp opposition to some of the President's projects, lost the post of majority leader of the Senate to Senator Barkley, of Kentucky, by only one vote after Administration intervention on behalf of Barkley. His committee will consider the tax revision program now being drafted as a result of extensive Treasury Department studies.

May Refer to Tydings.

There was speculation last night on whether the President, in his Monday address, would make any reference to Senator Tydings, of Maryland, another of the conservative bloc, who is in a hot fight for renomination with Representative Lewis, enthusiastic New Dealer, as his opponent.

The fact that Senator Tydings did not vote for the social security act, contenting himself with answering "present" on the roll call, might

New Incident Perils Peace of Soviet, Japan

Nippon Party Is Reported Fired On by Russians, Two Injured.

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo (Saturday), Aug. 13.—Tension between Russia and Japan increased today with a new border incident within 48 hours after settlement of the dangerous Changkufeng affair.

The new trouble broke out on sparsely-populated Sakhalin Island, north of Japan, where Moscow and Tokyo divide control. At an isolated corner of the Russo-Japanese boundary, Domei (Japanese News Agency) reported, infantrymen of the N. K. V. D., Soviet secret police, shot and wounded two Japanese policemen.

Adding to the gravity of the incident, the policemen, one of whom was hurt seriously, were escorting Ryukichi Tashirogi, a member of parliament, and an "inspection party" near the border, Domei said.

First Settled by Russia.

The agency reported the Russians opened fire without warning.

Authorities at Shikika, Japanese city on Sakhalin, reported a corps of police, rushed to the border to "investigate" the incident, now were confronting the Russians.

Sakhalin Island, lying close to the Siberian coast, was first settled in 1857 by the Russians, who owned all of it until 1905. In 1905 the Treaty of Portsmouth allotted the northern three-fifths to Russia, the southern two-fifths to Japan.

The boundary was made the fiftieth parallel, north. Following the Russian revolution in 1917, the Japanese occupied all of the island, which is 600 miles long and from 16 to 105 miles wide. They did not evacuate the northern part until 1925.

Briton Denies Nazis Talk for All Sudetens

Lord Runciman Confers With Anti-Henlein Leaders.

Special Cable to The Post.

Prague, Aug. 12.—Lord Runciman disregarded today the claim of Konrad Henlein's Nazi party that it alone was qualified to speak for the country's Sudeten German population, and tonight the Henleinists were unprepared to challenge his action.

Two aides of Lord Runciman, British mediator of Sudeten minority questions, conferred this afternoon with Wenzel Jaksch, leader of the anti-Nazi German Social Democrats.

Lord Runciman appears confident no serious obstacles will be met until direct negotiations between the two sides begin next Wednesday.

Officers Back Government.

Both sides have issued strict orders that incidents which could disrupt the present conferences are to be avoided. Both sides, however, are showing just enough strength to keep their forces in line. For example, Henlein representatives refused to attend tonight the dniner given by Foreign Minister Kamil Krofta, in honor of Lord Runciman. Yet, on Wednesday, they will sit around the conference table with government leaders.

On the government's side, there was a slight show of strength tonight with the publication of a statement from the Czechoslovak Reserve Officers' association that:

The authority of the state must in no way be tampered with, undermined or set aside through any action or words. No retreat from this position must be made. In accordance with it we can live and work, resist and fight. We can die for it. But we cannot re-

French Law Bars Visits to Italy as Retaliatory Move

Paris, Aug. 12 (U.P.).—Premier Daladier issued a decree tonight forbidding any French citizen to visit Italy without special permission.

The decree, further complicating Italo-French relations strained by repeated differences arising from the Spanish civil war, was admitted to be a retaliatory measure decided upon as a result of Italy's recent action along the same line.

Metz, France, Aug. 12 (AP).—German authorities withdrew permits today from German miners who were crossing the French-German frontier daily to work in French mines.

Fliers, Preparing Return to Berlin, Plead for Quiet

New York, Aug. (AP).—Germany's long-distance fliers hung "do not disturb" signs on their bedroom doors tonight in preparation for a 21-hour return flight to Berlin tomorrow.

Their four-engined monoplane "Brandenburg," serviced by a German ground crew, awaited them at Floyd Bennett Field where they arrived yesterday after a non-stop flight of 24 hours, 56 minutes from the German capital.

Mexican Plane, With 11 Aboard, Missing in Gale

Mexico City, Aug. 12 (U.P.).—A Mexican aviation company transport plane, carrying eight passengers and a crew of three, tonight was missing on a flight from Villa Hermosa, Tabasco State, to Vera Cruz, the company, a subsidiary of Pan-American Airways, announced.

A plane was sent from here to search for the missing craft.

At 12:05 p. m. the pilot reported that all was well aboard. Thirteen minutes later he radioed that the plane was flying through a heavy rainstorm, 11,000 feet high. No further word was received.

Beggar Woman's Skirt Cache Yields Bankroll of $2,898

Philadelphia, Aug. 12 (AP).—Today, as for many days, a little woman stood on a downtown street corner, stretched out a thin hand and piped a plea for alms.

A policeman strolled over to her, took her by the arm and led her away. A matron searched her clothing. A gold coin fell out; then another and another. The matron found bulges in the skirt. Coins and bills had been carefully stitched in.

2 Children Hit As 'Emergency' Is Proclaimed

1 Critically Hurt, Other Has Chance to Live; Safety Board Named.

By Howard F. Wentworth.

Two more children, battered by automobiles, were reported near death last night as new machinery to combat District traffic evils was set in motion by Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen.

Following a two-hour safety meeting, attended by 21 civic and municipal leaders, Hazen named a permanent advisory committee to study the problem of accident prevention and recommend a continuing program of action.

Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox was appointed chairman of the group and will work with 12 citizen and District department representatives. Hazen admonished the new committee that Washington expected results and called for "immediate recommendations."

But even as the safety rally convened, the names of new child traffic victims were added to the rising casualty list.

Parents Get Most Blame.

At Emergency Hospital, Charles Morgan, 7, colored, fought to recover from critical injuries received when he darted from between two parked cars and was struck near Sixth street and Indiana avenue northwest. He suffered a possible fractured skull and serious brain injuries.

Another youngster, Thomas G. Proctor, colored, 3, was given an even chance to live at Providence Hospital, where he was taken with a fractured skull and internal injuries. He was struck while playing in the street near his home.

It was agreed at yesterday's safety meeting that "a serious emergency exists," and Hazen urged that every effort be bent to determine "what more we can do to stop this tremendous toll of deaths."

Boy, 7, Draws WPA Wage by 'Clerk's Error'

By the Associated Press.

Smithfield, Pa., Aug 12.—Arthur Malone, father of a 7-year-old boy hired and fired by WPA, today was "burned up" by what he termed a "clerical error" listing his son, Richard, as a relief worker.

Malone, whose son was mailed a $6.54 WPA check, declared:

"It looks like someone slipped up in Richard's case."

Lyell L. Buttermore, WPA director in the three southwestern Pennsylvania counties, said the boy had been assigned to a job through "clerical error." State WPA headquarters in Harrisburg declared two timekeepers had been suspended after investigation "turned up information that pointed to collusion."

"Can't Lift a Shovel."

Arthur Malone, discussing the "clerical error," said he went to WPA offices as soon as Richard and his brother, David, 14, cashed the check.

"They came home laughing at the idea of Richard drawing pay from the WPA. Why that boy can hardly lift a shovel.

"I took the money back and retrieved the check and took it at once to the WPA. . . . Now we're even off relief."

Malone said Buttermore and Max Whoolery, one of those suspended, came to his home in this Fayette County town near Uniontown and showed him an assignment slip for Richard.

"I went into the house and brought out our assignment slip that had never been used. Did their eyes bug out!

"Furthermore, neither Whoolery nor the other clerk could identify either Albert, David or myself as having worked on the job."

He charged that the slip shown

U. S. Missions Bombed in Raid By 100 Planes on Chiang Base

By the Associated Press.

Hankow, China, Aug. 12.—One Japanese war planes poured bombs into Hankow and the neighboring cities of Wuchang and Hanyang today in one of the Chinese-Japanese war's most disastrous and spectacular air raids.

The bombs and the flames that spread in their wake killed or wounded 400 civilians of the tri-city area, 600 miles up the Yangtze River in the heart of China.

Two American mission properties were directly hit. More than 300 residences, most of them humble, were destroyed, and tens of thousands of dollars worth of railway equipment, crude oil and kerosene were blown up.

[A United States Marine patrol in the International Settlement arrested three Japanese "armed thugs" today after an incident in which an American sergeant was threatened, the United Press reported.

'Scientist' Roosevelt's Catch To Enrich National Museum

Dr. Waldo L. Schmitt, marine zoologist, of the Smithsonian Institution, who accompanied President Roosevelt on his recent Pacific cruise, returned to Washington yesterday with a healthy tan, 60 species of fish, 2,000 pounds of boxes, tanks and equipment and an enthusiastic appreciation of the President as a benefactor of science.

Several of the fish, including some caught by President Roosevelt himself, will greatly enrich the collection of the National Museum, said Dr. Schmitt. Among the rarer finds were good examples of the thread-fin bass, Southern barracuda, rainbow runner and the wahoo.

"Some of these specimens are worth the whole trip to us," Dr. Schmitt said. "A few of the fish and a great many crustaceans we haven't even identified yet." Pending an intensive study of the collection, Schmitt said it was impossible to tell whether any new species had been caught.

During the three weeks of the Presidential cruise, Schmitt filled his packing boxes not only with strange and exotic fish but also with botanical and geological specimens and with birds and snakes and even fossils.

A particularly valuable botanical find was made at Cocos Island, off the Central American coast, Schmitt said. Flowers, ripe seeds and seed-

Lewis Scored By Tydings for Backing Black

Senator Flays Opponent as as Trying 'To Exuse His Indorsement'

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Aug. 12.—Senator Tydings said tonight in a statement Representative David J. Lewis "had tried to excuse his support and indorsement of Mr. Justice Black by sidestepping the issue."

The statement followed a speech by Tydings, Democratic opponent of Lewis for the Senate, in which he assailed Lewis' indorsement of Senator Black to the Supreme Court despite Black's former membership in the Ku Klux Klan.

"Lewis says the objection to Mr. Black was not due to Black's background, but because Mr. Black was a liberal," the statement said. "This causes me to ask, 'Can a man be a liberal who is a member of an organization which proscribes blanket groups of American citizens from its membership and which foments racial, religious and group prejudices?'

"I hope Lewis will explain to the people why he feels affiliations of this kind are not prejudicial to the dispensation of justice by our highest court."

At Baltimore, Representative Lewis repledged himself to the leadership of President Roosevelt and assailed Tydings for being "on the side of the Liberty League."

Lewis, in a broadcast interview with former State Senator E. Milton Altfield as interlocutor, recounted his struggles from the time he was 9 and-a miner, declaring in part:

"My opponent presumably had enlisted in the great cause of Democracy under the leadership of Roosevelt. But—no, he contemptuously disregarded the will of the people of Maryland.

"Votes Republican."

"He ran before, as he's running now—as a Democrat, but he has voted as a Republican. He must have a Republican conscience."

At Marlboro, State Senate President Lansdale G. Sasscer, seeking the Democratic nomination for Governor, charged the "saloon lobby" again is out to control the Legislature by dictating the nominee from Baltimore districts.

"I have repeatedly warned against the influence the lobbyists will have during the next administration if either of the two city candidates are nominated," he said.

Meanwhile, Baltimore's Mayor Howard W. Jackson, another candidate for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, toured Queen Annes County today and was guest of honor tonight at a doubleheader baseball game at Centreville with Easton.

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Aug. 12.—Last-minute filings and withdrawals for participation in the September 12 primaries raised the number of candidates for State and Federal offices to 41 tonight.

There were two withdrawals and four filings a few hours before the midnight deadline.

Secretary of State E. Ray Jones, of Oakland, filed for clerk of the appeals court and Dr. William G. Jack, Port Deposit, filed for State comptroller as Republicans, shortly after Gov. Nice announced them as his running mates.

John B. Gontrum, of Lutherville, filed for attorney general and Mrs. Elizabeth R. Menefee, of Cumberland, filed for Appeals Court clerk as Democrats. They completed the slate of Herbert C. O'Conor in his campaign for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination.

The two Democrats who withdrew from the campaign are J. Cleveland Grice, of Hagerstown, who sought the attorney generalship and Howard E. J. Harding who sought the nomination from the Third Congressional District.

The complete list of filings showed a marked preponderance of Democratic hopefuls. There were 30 Democratic candidates for the 11 offices while only 11 Republicans filed.

United States Senator—Judge Oscar Leser, of the Baltimore Supreme bench.

Attorney General—Leo Weinberg, Frederick attorney who previously withdrew from the campaign for the United States Senate.

Comptroller—Dr. W. T. Jack, of Rolandsville, Cecil County.

Former Owner Seizes Shipment Of Mexican Oil

Amsterdam, Aug. 12 (AP).—The Mexican Eagle Oil Co. was reported to have seized 1,000 tons of oil in two tank lighters at Dordrecht today on contention it still owned the expropriated wells which produced the cargoes in Mexico.

The seizure was reported to have had the permission of the port's Court of Justice. Mexican Eagle (Aguila) was one of the 18 British and American companies expropriated by the Mexican government, May 18.

Meanwhile, the Bataafsche Petroleum Co., a member of the Shell group, appealed from a court judgment which lifted an embargo placed previously on the Swedish tanker Lundgren carrying a shipment of Mexican oil. The embargo was granted June 18 and removed August 2.

Professor, Ousted by Nazis, Brings Knowledge to Capital

Dr. Artur Bogner Hopes to Teach Problem Children Here.

PROF. ARTUR BOGNER,

Prof. Artur Bogner, who, like Dr. Sigmund Freud, was driven from Vienna by the Nazis, has come to Washington, a distinguished immigrant with something to offer his adopted land. That is a brilliant record in the teaching of "problem" children.

Dr. Bogner, a graduate of the University of Hamburg and an erstwhile professor at the Emperor Franz Joseph Academy, who can write the symbols of four degrees after his name, hopes to resume his work here.

Until Hitler annexed Austria, Dr. Bogner was on the teaching staff of a famous school on the outskirts of Vienna, a private institution that specialized in backward or problem children.

Solved Child Problems.

Here well-to-do parents sent children who wanted to destroy things, children who didn't like people, melancholy and antagonistic children, and children with seemingly no memory or otherwise hard to teach. Dr. Bogner and his colleagues evidently did a good job with them, because pupils were sent to them from Hungary, Greece, Turkey and other countries.

Dr. Bogner, who is visiting Mrs. Anna Lansburgh, of 2240 Cathedral avenue northwest, told about the work, speaking in excellent English.

"In many cases," he said, "we found that problem children were the children of people who were unhappily married—nervous, irritable couples who lacked the patience to properly handle a child. However, that was not always the case.

"It was our rule to observe every child individually, to search for what you call the 'sore spot' and then determine the proper approach.

Case of Swelled Head.

"There was the case of August, for example. He was regarded as a bad boy. He liked to destroy things and run away. What actually was wrong with him was that he wanted to attract attention, be important. We put him in a play group and eventually we allowed him to carry the flag, which was a great honor. This satisfied his desire to be important and it also gave him a responsibility. After that August became a very good student."

In almost all cases of "nervous" children, Dr. Bogner said, it was found that the basis of their trouble was physical. Very often, he said, it was found that they had been getting an improper diet, and this was corrected.

City children, who had fought some particular study, were found to have a passion for gardening or raising animals, Dr. Bogner said, and this they were able to satisfy, since the school was located in a suburban area that had fields, a stream and plenty of space for athletics.

Family in Vienna.

Dr. Bogner is now making a study of the methods used in this country to handle children who, like those sent to him in Vienna, "are difficult but not impossible to educate."

The Nazi authorities forced him to resign from the faculty four weeks after the Hitler plebiscite. Members of his family still are in Vienna, but he expects them to join him in a few weeks.

Henry Futrovsky and Ben Perlmutter, officers of the Northeast Congregation, have invited Dr. Bogner to address the congregation this morning and tomorrow evening.

Roosevelt Will Ask Broader Security Over Radio Monday

give Mr. Roosevelt an opportunity to deliver some criticism, direct or indirect, of the Maryland senator. Lewis forces consistently have claimed Administration indorsement for their candidate.

Whether the President, following his call for defeat of Senator George at Barnesville, Ga., and his implied criticism of Senator Smith, at Greenville, S. C., would carry the fight to Senator Lonergan, of Connecticut, was another topic of conversation here. After a radio speech in which Lonergan said he was for the President, Attorney General Cummings declared the address apparently removed any obstacle in the way of the Senator's renomination. Since that time, Representative Kopplemann has entered the race against Lonergan as a New Dealer.

Another development yesterday was the revelation that the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee has investigators in Georgia looking into Senator George's charge that a Federal official had been removed "probably" because he was supporting George, and investigating also reports of irregular registrations in a number of counties.

Chairman Sheppard, of the committee, also announced that an investigator has been sent to Owen County, Ind., to inquire into charges of WPA political activity.

WPA Aides Accused.

An Owen County citizens committee in a joint statement to the committee asserted that local WPA supervising officials had been active in the primary election which preceded the recent State convention.

Representative J. William Ditter, of Pennsylvania, vice chairman of the Republican Congressional Committee, characterized the President's "march through Georgia" as a "design for dictatorship."

"Unable to accomplish one-man government even with a rubber-stamp Congress for five years," he said, "Mr. Roosevelt now presumes to tell the States how to vote. All our national history does not reveal a more audacious affront to the fundamental principles of balanced representative government."

As announced, the plans for the anniversary dinner of the social security act Monday include addresses by Frances Perkins, Secretary of Labor; Arthur H. Altmeyer, chairman of the Social Security Board; Oscar Chapman, Assistant Secretary of the Interior, and Miss Katherine Lenroot, chief of the Women's Bureau, Department of Labor. Frank Bane, executive secretary of the Social Security Board, will act as toastmaster and Senator Wagner will introduce the President, whose address will be broadcast from the White House.

Security Study Made.

While the subject for his Monday night address was not announced, it was generally expected that the President would deal with liberalization and expansion of provisions of the social security law, a study of which by the Social Security Board has been under way for some time at the request of the President.

Recommendations on liberalizing the old age pension provisions and broadening the act to include persons in occupations now exempt are to be ready for the next session of Congress.

Can't Live on 50 Cents.

Greenville, S. C., Aug. 12 (AP).—Senator Smith (Democrat), South Carolina, said in a statement here today he was in "hearty accord" with President Roosevelt in the view that "no person could be expected to live on 50 cents a day."

The President, speaking informally here last night from the platform of his special train, in a parting remark told a throng of South Carolinians " . . . I don't believe any family or man can live on 50 cents a day."

The assertion that a man could live on 50 cents a day had been attributed to Smith on the stump, but Smith had denied making the statement. Said Smith:

"Had the President read my statement in the Congressional Record, which merely states a hypothetical case by way of illustration, I am confident that he would never have made his statement last night, and when he reads the record, I am sure he will resent having been misled . . ."

Smith, who has voted against some New Deal measures, is opposed for renomination by Gov. Olin D. Johnston, who describes himself as "100 per cent for Roosevelt," and Edgar A. Brown, of Barnwell, a State Senator.

Clark Praises George.

St. Louis, Aug. 12 (AP).—Commenting in a statement on President Roosevelt's espousal of Lawrence S. Camp for the Democratic nomination for Georgia's senator over Senator George, Senator Clark, of Missouri, declared:

"Nothing could be further from my intentions than to attempt to intervene in any State except Missouri. However, I think I share the view of every other member of the United States Senate that Senator Walter F. George is one of the ablest, finest and best members of the Senate and one of the truest Democrats of our generation."

Clark, himself an occasional anti-Administration senator, was renominated earlier this month.

S. C. Club Here For Third Term

The Washington Young Democratic Club of South Carolina last night elected two uninstructed delegates to attend a State organization convention on a resolution urging President Roosevelt to run for a third term.

The group, which claims to represent 4,000 South Carolinians here, named Miss Louise Banville and David McLeod as delegates to the parley at Charleston, S. C., August 19-20. Herbert Lane, club president, and Rembert Matthews were appointed alternates.

The organization also was unable to agree on the senatorial candidates of Senator (Cotton Ed) Smith and Gov. Olin Johnston.

He will be succeeded by Rear Admiral Yancey F. Williams, now commanding the Special Service Squadron, about November 17.

Admiral Williams will be succeeded about August 31 by Rear Admiral John W. Wilcox, jr., now chief of staff and aide to the president of the Naval War College, Newport, R. I.

Security Taxes Reach Total of $887,946,271

38,265,000 Workers Now Covered by Old-Age Pension Provision.

On the eve of the third anniversary of signing of the social security act by President Roosevelt, the Treasury last night released figures showing the statistical position of the fund.

At the same time a laudatory statement concerning social security was issued by John L. Lewis, president of the Committee for Industrial Organizatiotn. Mr. Lewis added that his organization would "press for future advances" in the law as much remains to be done to make it simpler and more certain, with a minimum benefit allowance to support a decent standard of living.

So far $887,946271 in social security taxes have been deposited in the Treasury up to July 31, 1938. A total of $1,232,558,598 has been expended in carrying out provisions of the act, including transfer of the sum of $690,000,000 to the old age reserve account.

Tax receipts under Title VIII of the social security act, deposited from January 1, 1937, to July 31, 1938, totaled $737,526,539.32, and were paid by 38,265,000 employes and 1,787,000 employers.

This tax, which imposes an income tax on the wages of every employee and an excise tax on every employer of one or more, is popularly known as the old-age retirement tax. Both employe and employer pay a tax of 1 per cent of the employe's wages.

Benefit payments from the old-age reserve account, created under the provisions of Title II of the social security act, amounted to $6,210,545.30 on July 31. Interest on investments made by the Treasury in behalf of the reserve account totaled $17,674,043.86 on the same date, almost three times the benefits paid out. The grand total in the old-age reserve account on July 31 was $1,136,463,498.56, of which $700,300,000 has been invested in 3 per cent special Treasury notes.

States Deposited Billion.

Under provisions of title IX of the security act, which levied an excise tax graduating from 1 per cent for the calendar year 1936 to 3 per cent for the calendar year 1938 and, thereafter, on the annual pay rolls of employers of eight or more, 301,792 employers have paid $150,416,831.69 into the Treasury.

This tax, which is generally regarded as the unemployment-insurance tax, is paid only by employers. Employers paying taxes into a State unemployment compensation fund under a system approved by the Social Security Board are allowed to deduct from their Federal tax the amount so paid, not exceeding, however, 90 per cent of the Federal tax.

The 48 States, District of Columbia, Alaska and Hawaii on July 31, 1938, had deposited $1,093,707,194.82 in the unemployment trust fund, from which they had withdrawn a total of $227,945,000 from February 1, 1936, to July 31, 1938. This fund, which operates in accordance with section 904 of title IX of the security act, now has a balance of $883,763,099.79.

Lewis' statement said "organized labor will continue to support the basic principles embodied in the social security act but we shall not content ourselves merely with defending these principles against reactionary attacks. On the contrary we shall press for future advances.

"Much remains to be done to insure an adequate program of social security. Present laws are in imperative need of simplification, certainty and a minimum benefit allowance sufficient to support a decent standard of living."

Social security now is applied to the aged, the needy young, the handicapped, such as the blind and mothers without sufficient funds, as well as to unemployed.

George Opens Battle Against 'Interference'

Tells Atlantans State Can Handle Own Destiny; Camp Jubilant.

By the Associated Press.

Atlanta, Aug. 12.—Georgia's Democratic political alignments were tested today by President Roosevelt's declarations in behalf of New Dealer Lawrence S. Camp for the Senate.

Former Gov. Eugene Talmadge, himself a target in the Barnesville speech that Mr. Roosevelt fired at "dyed-in-the-wool conservatives," declared "the President had a right to do it."

Fight Just Begun.

Other reactions came swiftly. Senator Walter F. George, the veteran whom the President criticized for his position on "broad objectives of the party and the Government," asserted "We have just begun to fight."

Camp, United States district attorney for North Georgia, pitched his first post-Barnesville speech on accomplishments of the Roosevelt Administration since 1932.

"I believe 70 per cent of the people of Georgia are with the President," he said, "and I believe they will show their appreciation of his leadership by sending the man he approves to the United States Senate."

Townsendite William G. McRae, the "forgotten man" of the Barnesville speech, said the President had overlooked "the real liberal in this race."

Talmadge Hopeful.

Talmadge called attention to Georgia's county unit system for primaries—a system under which a candidate high in a county gets all its votes—as a factor in the four-man race for the seat of Senator George.

Speaking at Gainesville, he indicated he believed recent developments would react in his favor in splitting votes.

Talmadge remarked that "the President said I had made some proposals and promises, but he did not dare to criticize my record. . . ."

George, who voted against the original wage-hour bill, court revision and Government reorganization, told a crowd from an Atlanta hotel balcony that the events had "cleared the last remaining doubt as to the verdict" in the primary, September 14.

Resents Intrusion.

"I am confident," he said, "that the Georgia people are ready to fight this thing through to a finish and prove that we in Georgia are capable and determined to run our own affairs."

Camp spoke at Reidsville, Ga., and Claxton, comparing economic and social conditions of the Nation in 1936 with those prevailing since the inauguration of the New Deal.

"In the crisis of 1932," Camp said, "a kind Providence intervened and presented to the Nation Franklin Delano Roosevelt."

"He at once supplanted the policy of the Republican Party of only helping big business with his policy of helping the masses of the people."

McCrae declared at Vidalia the "President's indorsement of Mr. Camp and his condemnation of Senator George and Mr. Talmadge is merely the continuance of political sniping which is nauseating to good citizens."

Farley Assures Clarke of Backing By National Party

Pocatello, Idaho, Aug. 12 (AP).—Representative D. Worth Clark, Conservative Democrat who defeated Senator James A. Pope, ardent New Dealer, for the Democratic Senatorial nomination Tuesday, was offered backing of the National Democratic Committee tonight.

National Chairman Farley, vacationing in Michigan, wired Clark:

"This is the first chance I have had to xtend my heartiest congratulations. If I personally or the Democratic National Committee can be of assistance, please feel free to command me. You have my very best wishes for your success."

Prior to the primary Farley praised Pope's Senate record and indicated he favored the junior Senator's re-nomination.

Boise, Idaho, Aug. 12 (AP).—A rift threatened in the Idaho Democratic Party today over Senator Pope's defeat by Congressman Clark. Supporters of Pope maneuvered for an independent campaign to re-elect him November 8. They charged that Republicans "stole the Democratic nomination for United States Senator from Mr. Pope and gave it to Representative Clark."

German Who Flew Atlantic Slips Quietly Into Washington

Rudolf von Moreau, second captain of the Brandenburg which landed at New York yesterday after a flight from Germany, flew to the Capital yesterday in a transport ship. But there was no milling mob to greet him; only several reporters and the Air Attache of the German Embassy, who conducted him on a tour of the city.

Von Moreau, Hero of Latest Ocean-Spanning Hop, Disparages His Feat Here and Keeps Diplomatically Still on Airport.

As unheralded as the Berlin-to-New York flight which he completed Thursday was the arrival at Washington Airport yesterday of the trim young "second captain" of the monoplane Brandenburg.

Twenty-eight-year-old Rudolf von Moreau stepped out of an Eastern Airliner into the afternoon sun and strode rapidly up to the welcoming committee, which consisted of Lieut. Gen. Friederich von Boetticher, military and air attache at the German Embassy, a half dozen reporters and cameramen.

Von Moreau's heels clicked. His palm rose stiffly in the Hitler salute. Boetticher returned the greeting; and after a couple of "heils," the official welcome was over. No crowds, no cheering, no applause—and only one autograph seeker, a portly male.

The slight, blond officer, whose 25-hour trip across the Atlantic with three companions was perhaps the most unpublicized major air flight on record, said he had come to Washington to pay a personal visit to Gen. von Boetticher.

Modest almost to indifference about the Brandenburg's hop, von Moreau said in fairly good English, "I never thought before that it was such a short way from Berlin to New York. Danger? There was no danger." But lighter-than-air flying—"that's dangerous."

He said he had piloted the plane 12 hours, relieving Capt. Alfred Henke. "We ate chocolate and chicken and ham sandwiches," he smiled, "and coffee which at first was very hot but at the end was very cold."

Von Morea at first insisted the voyage was "only a record flight," but on prompting from von Boettitcher, he said it was also to obtain data for future commercial airlines.

Asked about Washington airport, von Moreau replied, "wonderful." He refused to compare it to the great Tempelhof flying field outside Berlin, diplomatically observing that "Tempelhof is new—still being built."

Under the wing of von Boetticher, von Moreau made a sight-seeing tour of Washingto and also called on J. M. Johnson, Assistant Secretary of Commerce. He returned to New York by air last night.

Von Boetticher insisted that von Moreau had come to the Capital solely to pay him a personal visit and that there was no official reason for the Washington trip.

South Is Called Poorest Area In U. S. Report

South

Endowments of all the colleges and universities of the South are less than the combined endowments of Harvard and Yale.

Four million Southern families, representing one-half of the total in that region, should have new housing.

Child Labor Common.

Child labor is more common in the South than in any other section.

The birth rate in the South is higher than that of any other region.

With 28 per cent of the population, the South has only 16 per cent of the tangible assets, such as machines and tools of industry.

Soil erosion costs the area more than $300,000,000 a year.

Sanitary conditions are deplorable, with only 26 per cent of Southern city and town households with flush toilets and 5.7 per cent of 3,000,000 farm homes with water piped to the house.

"The South is the Nation's greatest untapped market and the market in which American business can expand most easily. The people of the South need to buy, want to buy and would buy, if they had the money," the report said.

Physicians File Suit to Enjoin GHA Practice

Medical Society Drops 'Friendly' Attitude, Calls for 'Real Contest.'

Three of Washington's most prominent physicians yesterday filed suit in District Court for an injunction restraining the Group Health Association from "the practice of medicine" in the District.

Acting "on behalf of themselves and all other members of the medical profession licensed to practice" here, Drs. Sterling Ruffin, Prentiss Willson and Elijah W. Titus struck at G.H.A. on the heels of the Justice Department's decision not to appeal a declaratory judgment of July 29 in District Court upholding G.H.A. in all its activities.

That judgment, which was handed down by Justice Jennings Bailey, "is erroneous, without warrant of law and contrary to settled principles of law," the physicians maintain in the bill of complaint. They point out that the Bailey decree is not binding upon them because they were not parties to the proceeding.

Indication that an intensified legal fight against G. H. A. may be expected was given by the District Medical Society, in announcing the suit. It was stated "on behalf of the physicians who brought the suit" that the declaratory judgment proceedings instituted by G. H. A. were in the nature of a mere "friendly suit." In the injunction suit, however, "it is hoped that there will be a real contest of the grave and important questions involved and that the final determination thereof by the court of last resort will set at rest all legal questions involved in the operations of Group Health."

Filing of the injunction suit by the three physicians does, in effect, what the Justice Department announced Wednesday it would not do; it insures that the higher courts will decide whether or not G.H.A. is violating the District healing arts practice act."

Defy Cummings Threat.

The injunction suit, instituted as it is under the aegis of the District Medical Society, will be carried on in the teeth of the recent warning of the Department of Justice that it may prosecute both the American Medical Association and the local society for violation of the anti-trust laws. The threatened action stems largely from organized medicine's opposition to group health associations.

George P. Hoover, attorney for the plaintiffs, told The Post yesterday, "This suit is to clarify the situation here. We feel that the Government should have done this itself instead of coming after the Medical Society."

"The plain truth is," said Hoover, "that GHA is backed by the Government. The Government is trying to run everything and everybody."

"Dr. Ruffin, Willson and Titus," he said, "decided to settle once and for all the question of legality or illegality."

Equally positive statements came from representatives of the embattled GHA. Its president, William C. Kirkpatrick, said:

"We are not disturbed by the action of the three physicians. Our legal status has been determined by a final decree in a court of competent jurisdiction, which decree, deciding that GHA is not engaged in the practice of medicine, is grounded on such sound principles of law that the Department of Justice has deemed it inadvisable to appeal.

Society's Statement.

The Medical Society, in a formal statement accompanying its announcement, declared that "grave injustices have been done the medical profession of this community. Strong prejudices have been aroused on matters which are not generally understood by the public."

Denying "charges that the Medical Society has for selfish reasons opposed changes in the method providing medical care, particularly to those of low income who find it difficult to pay for needed service," the statement asserted, "nothing could be farther from the truth, for the primary concern of the Medical Society has been and will always be the health of the people."

The society said "propaganda on behalf of the Group Health Association, which has been widely disseminated, has given the impresion that the medical society is unconcerned with the needs of the people and that it opposes experimentation because experiments may adversely affect the income of its members. This is grossly unfair. True, it opposes many schemes which in its judgment are unsound.

"It has also been impressed with the fact that Government officials have taken more than ordinary interest in the Group Health Association. This is deeply significant and would indicate that the association can in no sense be considered an isolated experiment. On the other hand, the Medical Society recognizes that inadequacies in the delivery of medical care do exist, largely because of the country's economic situation.

To Offer Own Plan.

"At the present time the Medical Society is carrying on a thorough study of the need and supply of medical care in the District of Columbia, in co-operation with public and private organizations. With the aid of these groups it is hoped to determine facts upon which to base a constructive program.

"Concurrently the Medical Society is also working on a plan to provide medical care to the low-income group on a monthly-payment basis. It is contemplated that this plan will receive the consideration of the Medical Society at its first meeting in October. If approved, it will be submitted to civic and other interested organizations requesting their co-operation. Development of such a program must proceed with care so that the best interests of the people will be served.

"The Medical Society recognizes the need for the extension of preventative services as proposed by the United States Public Health Service. It pledges its wholehearted aid in the development of the proposed program. The Medical Society, however, does not believe that Government control of medical practice, whether it be by Federal, State or local government, is in the best interest of the people of this country."

Chesapeake & Ohio Canal Gets a Bath

Although it seems a little strange for a canal to get a bath, that is just what is happening to the historic Chesapeake and Ohio Canal. Part of the river has been diverted into the canal to flush it, and men with long-handled shovels stir up the silt, which washes out, and remove other debris—mostly tin cans.

Jerome Frank Wins More Pay For Rail Work

$6,000 Increase Granted by ICC for Aiding in Reorganization.

The Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday made public a decision increasing by $6,000 the maximum compensation, previously set at a total of $32,000, allowed to Jerome N. Frank for his services as special counsel in the Missouri Pacific Railroad reorganization proceedings prior to his appointment last January to the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Frank had filed a petition July 20 challenging a decision of July 8, in which the commission fixed the maximum allowance for his services.

Frank's petition asserted that the $32,000 was wholly inadequate, in view of the time devoted, the skill and ability required, the importance of the work, the stage to which the litigation had progressed at the time of his resignation on December 22, 1937, and the substantial accomplishments then achieved.

W. Va. Flood Waif Is Found Living In Chicken Coop

A few days ago word reached the DPA relief office that the child was being mistreated. To its amazement, "Skippy" was found in a chicken coop. He again was placed in charge of the hospital to await further disposition.

Interior Department Seeking Court Order for C. & O. Canal

30 Men in Hip Boots Shovel to Loosen Debris as Opening of 31st Street Gates Increases the Flow of Water.

Workmen began flushing the lower portion of the Chesapeake & Ohio Canal yesterday as the Interior Department announced it would seek court approval of a contract for sale of the historic waterway to the United States for $2,000,000.

Thirty men with shovels and hip-boots waded in the canal, prying loose debris to be washed away by the flow of water greatly increased by the opening of the Thirty-first street gates.

The Interior Department announced that both the circuit court for Washington County, Md., and the Federal district court here would be asked to aprove the contract under plans which contemplate transfer of the century-old waterway to the Government by next January and its transformation into a recreational area.

A majority of the stocks and bonds of the old Chesapeake & Ohio Canal Co. are owned by the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad. Court approval of the transaction, to be financed by the Public Works Administration, is necessary because the canal property is in receivership.

With completion of the purchase the Government will become owner of all property formerly used by the company from Georgetown to Cumberland, Md., including lock houses, inns and other buildings having historic associations with the early development of the Cumberland Valley.

With the canal company the Government will also acquire all existing records of the original "Patomack Company," formed by George Washington and associates, who first proposed the inland waterway. Many of the records, officials said, are in Washington's handwriting.

G. L. Nicolson, director of the company, said the workmen would probably complete the job by tomorrow.

Tons of scrap iron, tree stumps and old rubber tires were loosened by the workmen and sent on their way to Rock Creek and eventually to the Potomac River.

Rebels Besiege Key City to Rich Mercury Mines

Insurgents Strike Swiftly in South to Surround Cabeza del Buey.

By the Associated Press.

Hendaye, France, Aug. 12.—The insurgent army of the Spanish southwest tonight laid siege to Cabeza del Buey, central link of the government line defending the rich Almaden mercury mining region.

Striking swiftly east on the mountainous Estremadura front, insurgents under Gen. Queipo de Llano drew a ring around the fortified town before the hard-pressed government could rush in reinforcements.

The garrison at Cabeza del Buey, however, held its positions within the town against the first assaults.

The struggle for one of the richest regions of Spain's natural resources had become the major action in the two-year-old civil war. Insurgents reported conquering 675 square miles in the last two days.

Insurgent and government forces were virtually deadlocked on the other battlefronts.

British View Month as War Turning Point

If Peace Can Be Kept Now, Conflict Is Far Off, Officials Tell Roper.

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Roper disclosed yesterday a conviction of high-placed English friends that Europe will pass through the crisis of war threats in the next 30 days.

Roper, who returned this week from a month's visit in Great Britain said in an interview:

"The people with whom I talked said that if they could get through the next month without war, there would be no general European war for at least a year and probably for years to come."

Assurance Restored.

He explained that when he was in England two years ago, Britons appeared "jittery" about the propects for peace because of their lack of military preparedness.

"Now," he continued, "the English believe their rearmament program is far enough along to command respect and peace."

The Commerce Secretary said some Englishmen who formerly interested themselves only in promoting solidarity of England and the United States now are talking in terms of all demomcracies, regardless of race or language.

President Roosevelt, returning today from his vacation cruise, will have opportunity to receive from Secretary Hull the latest reports on the troubled European and Far Eastern situations.

The Russo-Japanese dispute, though apparently eased, is expected in informed quarters to hasten the President's selection of an American Ambassador to Moscow.

Post Unwanted.

There has been no public indication of whom the President has in mind for the thorny and not much coveted post, vacant since Ambassador Joseph E. Davies was transferred to Brussels in June.

In the absence of an ambassador in Moscow, the State Department has been getting its reports on the Russo-Japanese situation from Alexander C. Kirk, charge d'affaires of the embassy. Kirk, 50-year-old Chicagoan, is one of the most experienced officers in the foreign service.

He served both in Berlin and The Hague during the World War, then spent three years in Tokyo and Peiping, followed by a tour of duty in Mexico City. Later he was assistant to the Undersecretary of State here.

As counsellor of embassy in Rome for almost the last ten years, Kirk had ample opportunity to study the rise of the Fascists and much of the inner workings of European diplomacy. He scarcely had unpacked his bags in Moscow when the present dispute arose.

Predecessor Home.

Kirk replaced in Moscow Loy W. Henderson, first secretary of embassy, who had been charge d'affaires for periods up to eight months at a time.

Henderson, back after four and one-half years in Russia, passed through Washington today en route to his Colorado home on vacation. He is expected to head the Division of Eastern European Affairs on his return here.

Military developments in the Far East are being studied at Moscow by Lieut. Col. Philip R. Faymonville, military attache. He has 20 years familiarity with relations between Russia and Japan and has traveled extensively over the whole zone under dispute.

Appraiser Denies Saying Dr. Morgan Hinted TVA 'Gyp'

Knoxville, Tenn., Aug. 12 (AP).—TVA Land Appraiser W. N. Garrett denied late today he told a fellow employe that Dr. Arthur E. Morgan, ousted TVA chairman, once suspected his associates in the authority of "collusion" in the Berry marble case.

Garrett testified before a Congressional Investigation Committee delving into the marble leases of Senator George L. Berry (Democrat), Tennessee, and his associates as part of the TVA inquiry.

Charles G. Mynatt, of the TVA legal department, had quoted Garrett earlier today as saying he and Dr. Morgan suspected a "tie-up to 'gyp' the Government" between Berry and TVA "big shots" who included TVA Director David E. Lilienthal.

Both Mynatt and Garrett investigated the lease purchases for the authority. The leases last winter were condemned as "commercially worthless."

WPA Crew Starts Landscaping 'Barrens' Around Zoo Buildings

$285,000 Available, Workers on New Project Increased to 90; Two Iguanas Added to Lizard Collection.

An extensive WPA project at the National Zoological Park, involving joint expenditures of nearly $295,000, was stepped up yesterday to employment of a total of 90 workers.

The project in its preliminary stages consists of landscaping the "wide open spaces" that have been eyesores ever since construction of the new PWA buildings. The program, approved by President Roosevelt Friday, will continue grading and beautification operations left incomplete by the last WPA project, which expired July 20.

"We want to get a suitable settiling for our fine buildings," Ernest P. Walker, assistant director of the Zoo, said yesterday. "We are tired of looking at great barren areas."

First work in the new program includes continuing grading of the hill below the elephant house and of the area between the small mammal and antelope houses, as well as extension of the stone retaining wall north of the elephant house up to the end of the flight cages.

In a few days, grading will be started at the upper end of the elephant house, Walker said. He added that other features of the program have not yet been definitely settled but that the work will continue until end of the fiscal year. The WPA, he said, is to supply most of the labor and some of the material, to a value of about $245,000. The zoo will furnish $40,000 of labor and material, he stated.

Latest of the zoo's acquisitions is a couple of iguanas, green and black lizards from Central America. The zoo hasn't had any iguanas in more than a year. One zoo authority stated yesterday he wasn't sure if the newcomers were male or female, as "it's pretty hard to tell."

Except when they are in zoos, iguanas spend a large part of their lives in trees. They are fairly common in tropical America, but are hunted by natives for their flesh, which is said to taste somewhat like chicken.

Legion Rescinds Bid to LaGuardia, Branded 'Radical'

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Aug. 12.—Mayor LaGuardia heard that an invitation to attend the Pennsylvania State convention of the American Legion in Scranton, had been rescinded because he was "a radical," just as a letter from Bernard A. O'Hara, executive secretary of the Pennsylvania Legion, formally inviting him to the affair, was received today at City Hall.

"It's either funny or dishonorable," the mayor said of reports that he was "persona non grata."

The letter said "The Legionnaires of Pennsylvania will consider it a special tribute to them if you can arrange to be one of their distinguished guests."

Engineers Parade.

The 121st Engineers completed their last full day of camp with a formal regimental parade in which officers expressed approval of improvement in the marching ability of the men. Earlier in the afternoon the regiment was formed on the parade ground while Col. John W. Oehmann, commanding, welcomed 80 recruits into the organization.

Equipment was packed later in the afternoon and hauled to waiting coaches by men of the 104th Quartermaster Regiment. Both Engineer officers and officers of the Quartermaster Corps highly praised the work of Company B, the headquarters unit which has been furnishing the Engineers motor transportation during their summer encampment. The Engineer regiments will entrain here at 8:30 a. m. tomorrow and arive at Washington at noon.

Athletic events of the Fifth Battalion Fleet Marine Reserves are keeping the camp in high spirits as volley ball and baseball occupy the afternoon periods.

Company F commanded by Capt. Ralph M. King, downed Company E, 10 to 2, in a softball game. First Lieut. Henderson A. Melville's Company C came out ahead in volley ball when they won a hard fought battle from Company D, 2-3.

Soda-Pop Heiress' Coming-Out Party Will Cost $50,000

Newport, R. I., Aug. 12 (U.P.).—Most lavish of the social introductions of the decade, the coming out party of Lesley Hyde Ripley, plump, little heiress to a soda-pop fortune, is costing her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry B. Ripley $50,000 to $75,000.

The Ripleys were reticent about the cost and to Mrs. Ripley, her daughter's debut was "merely an informal party for a few friends of the family and the debutantes of the season." All in all, more than 800 will be there.

Representing the more quiet and reserved type of debutante, Miss Ripley finds diversion in bathing and the theater. Shortly after her debut, she and her parents leave for Europe.

labor in State prison in Thomaston for the sum of your natural life."

As deputies moved to Carroll's side to take him from the courtroom, his wife pushed forward from the spectators' section to his side. They exchanged no words as they walked down the stairs from the courtroom arm in arm, but Mrs. Carroll was weeping.

They went directly to the adjacent cell block and she accompanied him behind the bars.

Seconds later, she swooned and was assisted from the jail to lawn outside and revived. Two deputy sheriffs drove her home.

It was announced that Carroll will be taken to State prison tomorrow morning.

200 Pack Courtroom.

The courtroom was crowded with over 200 spectators when the jury filed in. Mrs. Carroll, wearing a black and white dress and a red coat, sat midway in the spectators' section. Mrs. Carroll bit her nails as the jurors took their seats. Her husband entered the court smiling and confident. He gripped the back of a chair when he heard the verdict.

Tempering the denunciations by the prosecutor—"ravisher of his own daughter, murderer of a man who gave his lifetime to carrying solace and anodyne to the suffering"—were the words of his counsel, portraying him as a faithful law officer who became the hapless victim of a cruel fate.

The State contended that Carroll slew Dr. Littlefield when the veteran practitioner threatened to expose and jail him as the seducer of his own daughter, Barbara.

Barbara Sees Movie.

While her father was being sentenced, Barbara Carroll was attending a movie with her cousin, Lenore Carroll, 17. They saw the jungle movie, "Booloo." This afternoon, shortly after the jury began its deliberation, the two girls went to a beauty parlor for new waves and haircuts.

Barbara said she had received another batch of fan mail, including four proposals—one from a 63-year-old man who wants her to wash dishes.

When Barbara was told the verdict she awayed and started to weep. Her cousin attempted to comfort her, but also broke down. Barbara said:

"I have no comment other than to say that in view of the evidence submitted by the State, I couldn't see how the verdict could be other than not guilty."

Around the courthouse a carnival spirit prevailed. Women in afternoon dresses and women vacationists in shorts or beach pajamas were numerous in the excited throng that moved through the corridors. The hot-dog hutch in the portico of the courthouse did a large business in sandwiches, 25-cent postcards (autographed by Barbara) and ice cream.

Dwyer Asks Justice.

Thomaston, Me., Aug. 12 (U.P.).—Paul Dwyer, serving life in State prison here for the murder of which Francis M. Carroll was convicted tonight, learned of the jury's verdict over the prison radio.

Later, he told a deputy warden: "All I ask for is justice."

Guards said that Dwyer had appeared downcast during the day, but perked up immediately after the broadcast."

Boston Bans "Barb."

Boston, Aug. 12 (AP).—The Boston Licensing Board today announced it would revoke the license of any night club, restaurant or cafe that engaged Barbara Carroll as a public entertainer.

ling plants of an undescribed type of palm growing there were brought back to Washington. The palm was known to science only through part of a leaf brought to the outside world in 1908, he said.

"This palm has been much desired by botanists," Schmitt declared, "not only for proper description but also for the purpose of propagation." He added with a smile, "You ought to have seen our botanist when I gave him that palm."

600 Pounds Frozen.

But Schmitt was especially pleased with his fish collection. "The larger game fish are difficult specimens to preserve and transport," he said. "However, the excellent refrigeration facilities aboard the Houston enabled us to transport frozen specimens right back to Washington. I brought a 600-pound box full of frozen fish."

Some of the best fish were taken from the waters around the Galapagos Islands, Schmitt said. A specimen resembling the Pacific amberjack of Lower California was caught. If it turns out to be that species, "a notable extension of the range will have been established," he said.

The collections made by the President and his party in the Galapagos region are of especial scientific value, as they were made at a time of year when the islands are seldom visited, Schmitt pointed out.

Entire Party Helped.

Dr. Schmitt said the entire personnel of the Houston, as well as the Presidential party, had been of great assistance in building up the collection. "At about 11 o'clock one night," he said, "one of the engineer officers called me to the engine room to see a lot of bright red shrimp they had discovered in the suction side of one of the condensers opened for repairs."

Even the anchor chain yielded treasure. "On the 145 fathoms of chain laid out at the Tagua Cove anchorage, these species were found; A starfish, a number of spiny sea-urchins, a quantity of red shrimp-like crustaceans, a spire shell to which a calcareous red sea plant was attached."

In short, according to Dr. Schmitt, the trip couldn't be beaten."

by the Japanese, whose most important industry is the herring fisheries.

The "investigation party" reported fired on included the son of the Legislator Tashirogi, who communicated with his mother in Tokyo saying he was not hurt.

Meanwhile the incident at Changkufeng, on the mainland near the juncture of the borders of Siberia, Korea and Manchukuo, was considered closed.

Fighting which marked the later stages of the month-old incident ended Thursday, said reports from the sector. The truce followed an agreement reached in Moscow between Foreign Minister Maxim Litvinoff and the Japanese Ambassador, Mamoru Shigemitsu.

In this agreement, it was indicated in an abridged text of the Litvinoff-Shigemitsu conversations released Friday, Japan made most of the concessions.

him had been signed with an "X" and that someone had written the lad's name under it.

Lyell L. Buttermore, of Connellsville, Pa., head of the WPA district that embraces Uniontown, told The Post last night over long-distance telephone that Richard Malone, 7 years old, was erroneously given a WPA work assignment that was intended for his brother, Albert, 20 years old.

"The boys' father had been on the WPA rolls," Buttermore said, "but had become sick and was forced to stop work. It was intended to give a job to the older brother, Albert, but a clerk copied off the name of the wrong son, Richard, and mailed the assignment.

"Some one appeared, claimed the job and worked two days. Then he didn't show up for five days and was dropped, and a check for the work actually done was mailed in Richard's name.

"But we haven't found out yet who did the work. That accounts for the charges of collusion. We are still investigating.

"Now the mistake has been corrected, the job has been given to Albert, the older boy, and he is at work."

Thief Gets Hat Of Brown From Under His Nose!

Two police were on the job the other night, but some impudent theif stole the hat of Maj. Ernest W. Brown, police superintendent, right from under his nose.

While receiving a citizenship citation from the American Legion at the Mayflower Thursday night, the major slipped his hat on the chair in back of him on the speakers' platform.

But when he started for home, the hat was gone. And the G-man who sat near him during the exercies could give him no clews.

So yesterday Maj. Brown was wearing his old pamana—and keeping close watch.

In Shanghai a Japanese naval communique announced that the raid was "100 per cent effective" and that the headquarters of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek were destroyed. Hankow is the Chinese provisional capital. The Japanese estimated there were 500 casualties.

No Chinese planes took the air to combat the invaders, whose big machines droned over the city in the morning. There was an ineffective anti-aircraft fire.

In Wuchang the chapel of the Order of St. Anne Convent, operated by a mission of the American Episcopal Church, was demolished by a direct hit, while another bomb tore down a nearby sisters' residence in which three American women missionaries, huddled under a staircase, escaped without a scratch.

12 Invalids Killed.

Another bomb destroyed the American Seventh Day Adventists' city clinic in Wuchang, killing 12 Chinese patients. Many wounded had just been removed from the clinic when it was struck.

Bombs released from Japanese planes which dived low over the Canton-Hankow railway terminal blew up entire sections of track and killed most occupants of a nearby building in which there were several girl refugees.

Although the bombing attained a high degree of accuracy, being centered at railway yards and buildings, civilians were the greatest sufferers.

Liquor Dealers' Free Candy Bid For Trade Barred

Retail liquor dealers henceforth may not give away free candy with each purchase, the District Commissioners ruled yesterday.

In one instance it was reported a beer parlor was handing out cigars with each purchase of a stein of beer. In another, a drug store owner was offering a half-pound box of candy to purchasers of a pint of whisky.

In the same ruling the Commissioners said liquor dealers may not enter any contest sponsored by brewers or distillers. George W. Offutt, chairman of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, said this would grow into a "vicious practice."

Dealers and their employes are also forbidden entrance in any sales campaign relative to any beverage in which prizes are offered.

ficial link with organizations in this country. It was manned, he testified, by several former bund leaders from this country who have returned to Germany.

Roosevelt Plot Revealed.

The names of President Roosevelt and Senator La Follette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, of the Senate Civil Liberties Committee, came in during Metcalfe's testimony about the Silver Shirts in Chicago.

The investigator said he aided William Zachary, field marshal of the Chicago Silver Shirts, in refuting charges that Zachary had made a speech threatening "to shoot President Roosevelt." This help brought the investigator an invitation to attend a meeting of the Chicago Silver Shirts last Saturday night.

Metcalfe said that Zachary, at this meeting, urged members to get guns and ammunition to crush "the coming Communist revolution," oppose the Government reorganization bill as leading to dictatorship and prepare for a general collapse when powerful financial interests would attempt to place "John L. Lewis or some one else" in control of the country.

Fascist Groups Co-operate.

The investigator said Zachary told his followers that an attempt by the La Follette Civil Liberties Committee to get records of the Silver Shirts by subpena was an effort to "turn these over to the Jews."

At one point, under questioning by Chairman Dies, Metcalfe said "at least 90 per cent of the German-American element in the United States is absolutely opposed to the activities" of Nazi supporters. He added that many bund members did not know of activities by leaders.

The investigator said common aims led to co-operation in many American cities between Nazi storm troops; the Silver Shirts, a separate American organization; Black Shirts, composed of Italian Fascist supporters; White Russians and similar groups.

Former G-Man Testifies.

James J. Metcalfe, of Chicago, former Department of Justice investigator who trailed Dillinger for many months and was present when he was killed, told the committee how, under an assumed German name, he joined the German Bund in Chicago. He described this as an organization composed only of German citizens and taking its orders directly from Germany.

The witness is a brother of Investigator John C. Metcalfe.

"Members of this organization boast they intend never to become American citizens and scoff at American ideals and institutions of government. They hold military drill every Tuesday night. The goose-step is used," Metcalfe said.

"They say they are dissatisfied with the American form of government which should be national Socialist instead, and under one leader such as Hitler.

Openly Prefer Reich.

"Their entire loyalty is to Germany and they openly professed this."

"Why don't such people return to Germany?" Metcalfe was asked.

"I don't know, except they seem to like the better wages they get here and the complete freedom to talk," he said.

A letter from Gustave A. Brand, Chicago city treasurer, read to the committee, thanked the Chicago bund for a guest card to its clubrooms and its library.

Investigators said the library included several thousand volumes in German and much Nazi literature.

The committee also listened to an affidavit by Dr. Otto Willumeit, present Chicago bund leader, denying he was a Nazi or had any communications with German officials.

maneuvers and the necessity of establishing new reserve units has resulted in greater interference with civilian life than past maneuvers. The public's attention has been called to the preparations.

Trucks, buses and horses as well as buildings of the Nazi party and the Hitler Youth Organization have been requisitioner under a new law promulgated July 18.

The law requires that every citizen put his land, machinery and other possessions at the disposal of the army upon request.

London Is Anxious.

London, Aug. 12 (U.P.).—Massing of 1,000,000 or more German troops for maneuvers tonight spread anxious speculation across Europe that Reichsfuehrer Hitler may be preparing to bring pressure on Czechoslovakia.

Speculation persisted Hitler may be preparing for the eventuality of a grave crisis in the Sudeten problem.

German officials said it was "fantastic" to believe the Reich's military maneuvers were in any way connected with the Czechoslovak situation.

The financial editor of the London Daily Express said that fears of war, an industrial slump and unrest which might develop into revolt are causing prominent German industrialists to use every means to smuggle money out of the Reich.

Even Nazi party officials, the Daily Express said, are smuggling funds out of Germany despite the risk of arrest and imprisonment.

ing was widely split as to the cause or causes of Washington's mounting death rate among children, a major share of the blame was placed directly upon parents.

Miss Sibyl Baker, director of District playgrounds, pointed to the number of deaths among children "below playground age" and debunked agitation for additional play yards as a safety measure.

"A large number of these recent accidents," she said, "could not have been prevented by more playgrounds. Some of the little people who were killed were too small to get to the playgrounds and too young to play there even if they were taken. The first step to prevent these tragedies should be taken in the home."

M. O. Eldridge, acting director of traffic, presented figures showing that twice the number of children have been killed thus far this year than were killed in the entire year of 1937. The figures were: 1937, 8; January 1 this year to date, 15.

"All these fatalities," said Eldridge, "could not be charged to careless motorists. In most cases, the fault lay entirely with the child—and that is traceable back to the parents.

Eldridge urged a general program of one-way streets, parking restrictions in the vicinity of playgrounds and an intensive educational program among parents and children as remedies for the "appalling" situation.

Shower Sprays Promised.

"I seriously question whether more playgrounds are needed," he said. "It is my opinion that existing grounds should be improved and developed to attract more children."

Ross Haworth, acting director of local WPA, agreed to furnish an unlimited number of shower sprays in parks, playgrounds and roped off streets to entice youngsters away from the dangers of heavy traffic.

Commissioner Hazen agreed to act immediately upon any suggestions offered by the new committee and Gen. Cox said he would throw every resource of the National Guard and Marine Reserves behind the safety program.

In addition to Gen. Cox, the advisory committee includes:

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police; Eldridge, Barrett, Dr. Thomas Gosling, acting superintendent of schools; Washington I. Cleveland, A. A. A. manager; George Keneipp, manager of the Keystone Automobile Club; L. A. Carruthers, of the Federation of Citizens Associations.

Lansburgh & Bro. department store is the latest to join the movement. Company officials pledged support of The Post-Junior Board plan and agreed to intensify safety efforts among their truck drivers.

Situation "Desperate."

Coupled with yesterday's safety efforts, the Keystone Auto Club submitted to Hazen a nine-point program to aid Washington's "desperate' situation. It provided:

Immediate opening of all school playgrounds with or without supervision.

Closing of streets at certain hours in communities where playground facilities are inadequate.

Detailing of as many policemen as possible to promote child safety.

Improvement of playgrounds to attract more youngsters.

Install street sprinklrs on roped off streets.

Plan for an adequate safety program next year.

Use trained adult supervision at play spots.

Lynn Drake, of the Boy Scouts of America; Dorothy Davidson, Girl Scouts; Russell Thomas, Federation of Civic Associations; Mrs. Walter Fry, Parent-Teacher Associations, and Julian Brylawski, representing local theaters.

Acting to clarify present methods of presenting accident cases in Traffic Court, Judge John P. McMahon yesterday called a conference of Police Court judges and prosecutors.

It was decided that all accident cases would first be investigated by the corporation counsel before entering court. Under present methods, policemen simply file charges and the cases are taken before the judge. The new system, it is believed, will relieve court congestion and remove the necessity of trying "petty" cases.

In The Washington Post-Junior Board of Commerce program to enlist local trucking concerns in an organized safety program, plans were laid yesterday to invite all delivery service operators to attending coming sessions of eth Junior Board's accident-prevention institute.

Four other persons—two of them children—received minor injuries in traffic yesterday. They were:

Clair Rimer, 6, 1361 Girard street northwest, possible fractured leg, struck near her home; Franklin Gillon, colored, 4, 422 Elm street northwest, possible fractured leg, struck near home; Oliver Haugh, 46, 29 L street northeast, cuts and bruises, struck at North Capitol and K streets, and Samuel Cosby, 35, 801 V street northwest, sprained shoulder, fell from truck which ran onto sidewalk at Twelfth and H streets northwest.

Harold Amacher, 1445 Otis street northwest, who police said was involved in the Gillon accident, is being held on a charge of operating an auto with faulty handbrakes.

Dr. H. E. Wark Is Speaker at Foundry Again

'Religious Crisis in Germany' to Be One Topic of W. Va. Pastor.

Dr. Homer Ethan Wark, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal Church of Clarksburg, W. Va., will preach at both services at Foundry Methodist Church tomorrow as guest preacher for the second week in the absence of Dr. Frederick Brown Harris. "Pillars of a Good Society" and "The Religious Crisis in Germany" will be his subjects.

Dr. Wark, a native of Indiana, but brought up on a farm in Kansas, has had a wide experience in religious matters serving as pastor in the Kansas Conference, at the famous Memorial Methodist Church in Calcutta, and with the 137th Infantry in France during the World War.

Serving later on the graduate faculty of foreign missions at Boston University, where he had received his Ph. D. degree in 1908, he was enabled to travel leisurely through the Philippines, China, Korea and Japan, studying their civilizations and religions. Out of this came a book entitled "The New Era in Missions."

Invited to become president of West Virginia Wesleyan College, at Buckhannon, W. Va., in 1926, he served there for five years before accepting his present pastorate.

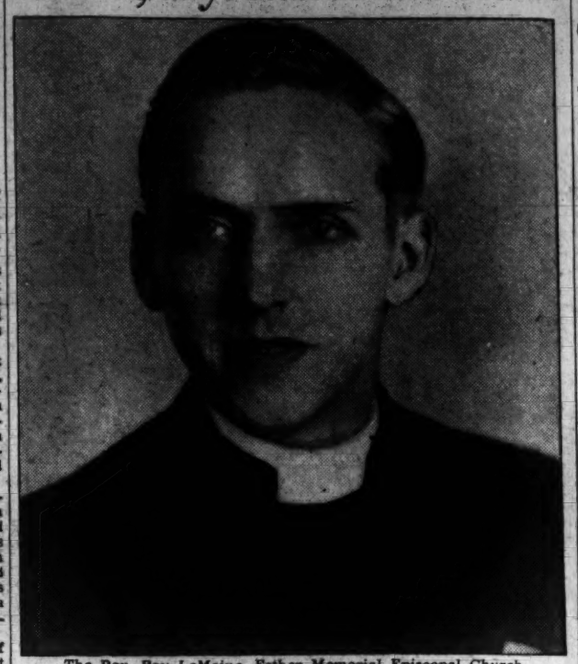
Episcopal-Presbyterian Unity Soon, Says Rev. Mr. Le Moine



The Rev. Roy LeMoine, Esther Memorial Episcopal Church.

Esther Memorial Church's New Pastor Once G. W. Student, Guide at Cathedral, Sees Progress in Movement.

When Protestant unity becomes a reality, probably within the next two generations, the Episcopalians and the Presbyterians will be among the first to unite, believes the Rev. Roy Le Moine, recently appointed rector of the Esther Memorial Episcopal Church.

"Our denomination and the Presbyterians think alike on many issues," according to the young minister, who was graduated with honors from the Seabury-Western Theological Seminary, Evanston, Ill., in June, and whom Bishop Freeman recommended to the Anacostia pulpit. He preached at St. Ann's Mission, Woodstock, Ill., while attending school.

Despite this Middle Western background, he has an intimate knowledge of Washington, gained in such jobs as an employe of the circulation department of a local paper, guide during the summer of 1937 at the Washington Cathedral, and student at George Washington University.

His hobbies lead him to spend most of his spare change on books, he admits, now, but he retains a love of fishing, swimming, baseball and stamp-collecting.

Prior to enrolling at the seminary in 1935, the Rev. Mr. Le Moine spent 15 months at a Kentucky Civilian Conservation Corps camp, a project he feels is doing a splendid job in physical and mental rehabilitation. While at the camp he married Miss Eula Pearce, a medical missionary student. They have no children. He holds a naval commission and is one of four Protestant chaplains at St. Elizabeth's Hospital.

The example set by his father, the Rev. Emanuel A. Le Moine, rector of St. Columbia's Episcopal Church, Forty-second and Albemarle streets northwest, inspired him to forsake a career in chemical engineering for the ministry. And he's now convinced his decision was a wise one.

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-serman is the following from the Bible: "I will greatly rejoice in the Lord, my soul shall be joyful in my God; for He hath clothed me with the garments of salvation, He hath covered me with the robe of righteousness, as a bridegroom decketh himself with ornaments, and as a bride adorneth herself with her jewels." (Isaiah 61:10).

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Immortal men and women are models of spiritual sense, drawn by perfect Mind and reflecting those higher conceptions of loveliness which transcend all material sense." (Page 247.)

Mercury Hits 120 In California Desert

Prosecutor Fails To Arrest Earle After Challenge

Harrisburg, Pa., Aug. 12 (AP).—Gov. George H. Earle's demand to be arrested on charges of political graft was unanswered today by District Attorney Carl B. Shelley's office and the Governor went ahead with preparations for an airplane vacation.

Shelley, a Republican, who petitioned for a grand jury investigation of the charges against the Governor and 13 associates, was on vacation. Earl V. Compton, one of his assistants, said it would be inconsistent with Shelley's position to comment on the Governor's radio talk last night in which Earle demanded immediate arrest "if there is evidence to justify such arrest."

The Governor said he would wait until 8 a. m. tomorrow for Shelley to meet the challenge, and then would depart with Mrs. Earle on a 10,000-mile airplane trip to South America.

Football Already.

With August not yet half over, football is already in the news. Our friends downstairs in the sports department report the baseball people burning up about it but add that there is no help for them. On August 31 the local professional grid team is scheduled to meet a college all-star aggregation. Naturally, they are in training for the tilt and this brings into action such luminaries as Sammy Baugh, who is always big news.

As a matter of fact, professional baseball poaches in exactly the same fashion on the time of many winter sports—notably professional hockey—by beginning "spring" training along in February. And speaking of professional hockey, it is interesting to consider the effect it has had on amateur hockey. (In passing, it is also mournful to consider that Washington still has no indoor rink). There is no question that college hockey today is a much faster and more expert sport as a result of the performances such teams as the Chicago Black Hawks and the Toronto Maple Leafs regularly provide.

Strange Capitalism.

Secretary Wallace's advice to AAA committeemen suggests that he is deeply troubled over the outlook for the latest experiment in control of agriculture. The 1938 farm act has been in effect only a few months. Yet the Secretary of Agriculture indicates that it is essential for AAA representatives throughout the country to launch a vigorous campaign to "save the act."

If opposition is now sufficiently strong to justify such measures, what is to be expected when the full effects of the drastic quota system are felt? The great majority of farmers have not yet experienced the coercive aspects of the law. When the underlying nature of the new agricultural adjustment act becomes fully apparent to them, the chorus of protests will be louder than that now heard. Perhaps Secretary Wallace is merely anticipating that development.

Mr. Wallace's warning to farmers ought to be carefully analyzed. He is quoted as saying that farmers face a "possible collapse of prices and destruction of the capitalistic system" if they fail to support the AAA. Since the prices of wheat and corn are not much above half what they were a year ago, and since cotton has suffered a substantial decline, the real source of Mr. Wallace's anxiety seems to be the "collapse of prices" in spite of the AAA.

Price declines would obviously be less serious from the farmers' viewpoint if they were not confronted by sharp crop restrictions. In the case of cotton, and to some extent wheat, surpluses can be sold abroad when prices are not out of line with world-market conditions. But when prices are pegged and acreage restricted, foreign buyers naturally look elsewhere for supplies once purchased here. Under these circumstances farmers are in danger of losing part of their market, as well as failing to gain the higher prices anticipated.

It is curious to hear Secretary Wallace expressing fears that critics of the AAA may bring about destruction of the capitalistic system. Many students of the Administration's present agricultural policy believe that the capitalistic system, so far as farming is concerned, is already on the way to the discard. Under a capitalistic system the size of crops is not regulated by a centralized bureaucracy. Nor are minority groups forced to abide by marketing quotas as the only alternative to payment of ruinous penalties.

It is true that American farmers under the AAA are not yet as thoroughly collectivized as are tillers of the soil in Soviet Russia. The AAA permits farmers to vote down proposed marketing quotas. But the rewards offered American farmers for submission to centralized control are such that the practical effects of the two systems are not very different. American agriculture is already far advanced along the road to collectivism.

If Secretary Wallace were really interested in preserving capitalism, he would advise a hasty retreat from the coercive policy which is arousing so much antagonism among farmers. The way to save capitalism is not to abolish its basic principles. This system of private enterprise has many defects which obviously need correcting. But that fact does not give substance to the illusion that capitalism is to be preserved by supplanting it with collectivism.

Upon What Meat?

Senator George, being a courageous man, has regretfully accepted the challenge in President Roosevelt's assertion that he is unfit to serve the State which he has represented in the Senate for 16 years.

And in the Senator's statement that "the Democratic Party is not a one-man party" there echoes the spirit of that Georgia which three-quarters of a century ago endured both torch and sword rather than submit to compulsion from without. Mr. Roosevelt, a self-styled "Democratic Yankee," would do well to remember that Georgia freely risked the ruin and the devastation of which he still finds traces there. Georgia would be less poor today had she been less proud—more willing to capitulate—when last brought face to face with a not dissimilar issue.

It is the President who has forced Georgians, and all others who believe in the Federal form of government, to think in terms of Civil War analogies. It is the President who has invaded this sovereign State and returned its characteristic hospitality by throwing his enormous influence against the man who has been three times chosen as its Senator. It is the President in that capacity who has done this. The flimsy pretext that he can intervene as party leader without invoking his executive position has been dropped. "To carry out my responsibility as President," he said at Barnesville, "it is clear that there should be co-operation between members of my own party and myself." We have italicized his words.

Mr. Roosevelt, however, has reversed the historical parallel. At Fort Sumter it was State aggression on unquestionable Federal authority which forced an avertible war. At Barnesville this week the Federal Executive encroached upon the unquestionable right of every State to choose its representatives in Congress without subjection to external pressures. The fact that Mr. Roosevelt proposes to use in behalf of liberal objectives the sweeping authority he desires makes not the slightest difference. There never was a dictator who did not regard himself as fundamentally a liberal. There never will be.

II.

The magnitude of the issue posed by President Roosevelt in the Barnesville address is clear. It will become more so if this precedent of executive interference in local elections is given the stamp of public approval. There is no possible theoretical justification, under the American system of government, for what Mr. Roosevelt has done. But if it obtains the pragmatic justification of political success the fundamental error of the action will be temporarily overlooked. We shall then have, as a matter of common practice, a condition which is dreaded by all thoughtful citizens. We shall then have the full force of centralized authority directed as a matter of course against the heretofore firmly-established right of local communities to decide local matters for themselves.

Even if it meant that a benevolent bureaucracy would transform every hamlet into a Utopia, this change would be undesirable. It would be undesirable because it would mean the end of representative government. Included in that phrase is the privilege of every American community to choose its local council, its district assembly, its State legislators, its representatives in the National Government, according to its own uncoerced will. These representatives may be of high grade, of middling or of low, but in every case the locality can say of them: "They are our own." On the assumption that home rule is by and large the best rule, the Government of the United States—specifically not one united State—was founded and has as yet endured.

In practice, of course, the overthrow of local self-government by centralized authority would not mean Utopia or anything remotely approaching it. The result, as present portents show all too clearly, would more nearly resemble the carpet-bagger days which Georgia, among other Southern States, has reason to remember as "The Tragic Era." It would invite unpleasant comparison with that practice of a former British King of whom the colonists, on July 4, 1776, declared that: "He has erected a multitude of new offices, and sent hither swarms of officers, to harass our people, and eat out their substance."

Can any intelligent person doubt that the dangers of remote control, against which the revolution was fought, are now being revived?

The WPA, the PWA, the whole "multitude of new offices," is assuredly not designed "to harass our people." Much of their work is of directly contrary effect. But the whole weight, the whole influence, of the spreading Federal bureaucracy is directed against those privileges and rights of local self-government which the United States was designed to protect on this continent for all time. Certainly this bureaucracy has benevolent intent. Undoubtedly a large number of its "swarms of officers" are inspired by good intentions for the American people. But folklore tells us that the road to Hell is paved with just such good intentions as those with which the President, in cutting at the roots of the American system, is inspired.

The repudiation of Senator George voiced by the President at Barnesville may itself seem no great matter. But what it portends is a breaking of the dyke which, though lately gravely weakened, has heretofore restrained the worst evils of unbridled patronage.

It is from what the President says that "swarms of officers" will take their cue. Right down the line, from White House to WPA foreman, the word will pass that this local candidate is out, that candidate in favor with those who control the purse strings. Few question the President's excellent motives. For that matter few question the sincerity of Hitler's motives. But a Fuehrer's will must be transmitted through millions of party agents. And in the process motives grow pale and shadowy. It is the naked force of grim coercion which the individual brownshirt—the local representative of centralized bureaucracy—comes to exert upon the citizen.

Against such coercion just one reliable dyke exists. It is the system of government which permits the citizen to vote without pressure from those who govern. It is the system which George Washington understood so clearly that he established an "invariable rule" of "not interfering directly or indirectly with the suffrages of the people in the choice of their representatives."

III.

When the signers of the Declaration of Independence set their hands to that document they prefaced it with the admission that "a decent respect to the opinions of mankind" required a statement of the causes which impelled the separation from the mother country. A decent respect for the opinions of Americans, in a matter so vitally affecting all of them, should equally impel the President to make clear exactly why he has broken with the American tradition as he did at Barnesville.

One reads that amazing speech in vain if the purpose is to discover exactly why Senator George is to be purged. No reason is vouchsafed, except the generality that he has dared to differ from the President "on the principles and policies of how the Government of the United States should be directed."

And how has Senator George differed from the man who has read him out of the Democratic Party as it is "constituted today"—the President's significant phrase? Examination of the record shows that since March 4, 1933, Mr. George has supported the New Deal in nearly every important vote. On only five outstanding occasions, an average of once a year, has he opposed the Administration.

One of these five occasions was when he voted to override the Presidential veto of the 1936 bonus. But many other Democrats, now warm in executive favor, did that.

Two other occasions were his votes, in 1937, against the Housing Bill and the Wage-Hour bill. But many other Democrats, who seemingly can still be tolerated in the party as now constituted, did the same.

The two remaining dissents of moment were Senator George's votes against the Court-packing Bill and the Reorganization Bill. By process of elimination, evidently, in those votes will be found the reasons for erecting the guillotine in Georgia. Those are the crimes for which Senator George, and other members of the little band who stood with him in these issues, are to be purged.

As has often been pointed out, the Reorganization Bill was not defeated on its merits. It was defeated because of suspicion as to the way it might be operated. And these suspicions traced, very obviously, to the mistrust aroused by the plan to pack the Court. So that fight, that fight to preserve an independent judiciary in which Senator George took leading and highly honorable part, is the real reason for his denunciation by the President.

There is no need, at this writing, even to summarize again the magnitude of the issue posed by the devious effort to increase the membership of the Supreme Court on the pretext that judicial efficiency would thereby be served. It is only necessary to recall that this far-reaching measure was not foreshadowed in the Democratic Party platform, that it had no formal party indorsement; that it was, in every essential, a project devised and sponsored by the Executive alone.

For daring to oppose the party leader on an issue which was without party indorsement; on an issue which the party as a whole would almost certainly have disowned; for this, it seems, Senator George has been branded for the slaughter. To obliterate a candidate objectionable to him, President Roosevelt is willing to overthrow a tradition as old as it is vital and a practice essential to the functioning of the American Government in its accepted form.

Of Mr. Roosevelt, as of another with ruthless ambitions before him, it may well be said:

Upon what meat doth this our Caesar feed,
That he is grown so great?

"God Bless You, Walter. Let's Always Be Friends."

Letters to the Editor

All communications must carry the writer's name and address, though pen names are permitted at the Editor's discretion. In fairness to other correspondents, brevity is requested. Letters are subject to condensation.

The Three Rs.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am in entire agreement with the letters recently published in The Post from parents who blame the District junior high schools for the deficiencies of graduates in spelling, arithmetic, etc.

Recently my daughter, who will enter the third year in a District senior high school this fall, and another girl in the same grade asked me to hold a little spelling bee for the two. Holding a dictionary, and picking out only words of ordinary use, which I pronounced very carefully and distinctly, I was surprised and annoyed to find that neither girl could spell correctly 50 per cent of the words. I find also that they are deplorably deficient in arithmetic, although they have made average or better than average marks in their grades.

I am an excellent speller, which I attribute to having been taught spelling by the syllable method, that is, spelling and pronouncing each syllable separately, which method, I understand, is not used in the District schools.

It seems to me that the higher authorities, who have jurisdiction over these subjects, should get busy and take prompt steps to correct the situation.

State Socialism.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A recent dispatch from Washington states that it is now proposed to appropriate upward of $800,000,000 in order to provide "free" hospital and medical service for those who cannot afford to pay the same. We have become so accustomed to similar expenditures of public money that we are no longer shocked by them. We have gone so far in the direction of state socialism that legislation to clothe every man in the country with uniforms would not be surprising. It is stated that 15,000,000 individuals are already receiving Government checks from Washington regularly, thereby making about one-third of our entire population beneficiaries of Uncle Sam.

This wholesale governmental charity constitutes a social disease which is insidiously destroying the self-respect and independence of the third of our population that is affected by it. Government is now expected to provide a good living for everybody, to side with union labor in all strikes, to chase away the wolf from every door. Meanwhile, nothing whatever is done to remove the causes of industrial depression. The deeper we get into the quicksands of state socialism the more difficult will it be to regain the firm foundation of Jeffersonian democracy.

No Mahatma.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Lindley is plainly a clairvoyant of the first water. In last Wednesday's Post he announced, "Nobody who knew Mr. Roosevelt's record or who read and believed his speeches during the 1932 campaign had much occasion to be surprised by what he did during the next four years." Not being a mahatma, how was I to know when F. D. R. promised in 1932 "an immediate and drastic reduction of governmental expenditures" that he really intended to jack up those costs 800 per cent? How was I to know when F. D. R. declared over and over for "a sound currency to be preserved at all hazards" that he meant to chisel a big segment out of the dollar and to repudiate Government debts by the same percentage?

How could I guess when F. D. R. vociferated "let us have the courage to stop borrowing to meet continuing deficits" that he was preparing to plunge into an orgy of borrowing? "None of this came by chance" we were later permitted to understand. "We are planning it that way." Not being let into the secret in advance, I was "surprised," believe it or not, that solemn promises and avowals need have no connection with ensuing actions.

Mr. Lindley would have done the public a service if he had furnished us in 1932 a mystic key to the hidden meaning of those campaign speeches. Was that a case of "getting elected under false pretenses" or not? Mr. Lindley scorches party members for not following all the meanderings of Mr. Roosevelt. But in 1932, Mr. Roosevelt, in his acceptance address references to the Democratic platform, said, "I accept it 100 per cent," and then proceeded to do whatever occurred to him.

At the beginning of his present scalp-hunting expedition, Mr. Roosevelt, in one of his obiter dicta remarked, "we are on a mental migration." Are Senators George, Tydings, Lonergan, McCarran and Smith to be excommunicated for asking where "we" propose to migrate?

Olson Applauded.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Please indulge me for a word of praise for your staff correspondent, Mr. Sidney Olson.

His article from Waycross, Ga., in The Post of August 11, 1938, on the Georgia Senate race, is the most clever and interesting article of the kind that I have read. It held me spellbound, and I could easily imagine myself among the auditors of the former Gov. Talmadge. At the risk of being regarded as a "Georgia Cracker" I must confess to becoming imbued with a strong desire to see him win, as being a man with the courage of his convictions and likely to present a striking contrast to the "yes men" in the Senate.

Please let us have more such articles from Mr. Olson in the other approaching primaries.

Relief Prosecutions.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: On page three of The Post of August 11 there is a serious misstatement relative to the policy of the Board of Public Welfare of Fairfax County. The article states:

"The new supervisor was also authorized to prosecute fathers whose children are on relief."

Of course, we do not authorize the superintendent of public welfare to proceed against all fathers whose children are on relief (as your article clearly implies) but merely those fathers who put their children on public relief and then refuse to work for their support. Furthermore, we do not resort to such a course unless we know that the man is perfectly able-bodied and capable of performing work if it is offered to him. In short, we intend to aid the genuinely needy, old or young, but we will take steps against men who could at least help to provide for their children, but refuse to do so.

RANDOLPH LEIGH.
Ranleigh, McLean, Va., Aug. 11.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "Pharmacist" makes a point. Physicians aren't pharmacists any more in a strictly modern sense. True, they're supposed to be; but now that operation of a pharmacy has come to embrace sandwich making, soda jerking, and the merchandising of bric-a-brac of all descriptions, it must be confessed that physicians are a wee bit out of date—notwithstanding the fact that they are pretty well grounded in pharmacology long before they are licensed to practice medicine.

So-called "counter prescribing" may have nasty repercussions for patient, pharmacist, and physician. It's painstaking and time-consuming work to compound a prescription accurately; it's very simple, however, to sell a package—or a dozen packages—of patent medicine. The profits are generous and, what's more to the point, patent medicines bring profitable repeat business, which is not the case with most prescriptions. One pharmacist could sell a dozen bottles of proprietary, with a multiplication of profits, while he's laboriously compounding one prescription.

Some time ago a physician among my acquaintances gave a patient a prescription (for a fee, of course) calling for large proportions of a known dangerous drug. Upon being presented to a Washington pharmacist, he literally jumped over the counter in his haste to warn the patient that such quantities of the drug in question would kill her. Rather than fill the prescription, he sold the patient a bottle of well-known proprietary containing approximately the same ingredients, but in less lethal proportions. Fortunately, the patient had sense enough to return to the physician to get the facts. The prescription was a proper one, since the patient was highly resistant to the drug and comparatively large quantities were required to bring about the desired effect. The physician knew this and prescribed accordingly. Needless to say, when the physician finished with the episode a pharmacist joined the ranks of the unemployed. However, it is refreshing to know that, for the most part, Washington pharmacists are more dependable than this particular person, but it illustrates a point.

Maybe it would discipline both pharmacist and patient who share "Pharmacist's" opinions if doctors would stop prescribing for a few months, simply handing the patient a note with the diagnosis and let "Pharmacist" prescribe. By the time the morgues are full of corpses, the hospitals full of "simple ailments" gone chronic, and the court dockets full of "Pharmacist vs. Patient," a lot of people would wake up to realize that there's a lot more to the practice of medicine than writing prescriptions and a lot more to pharmacy than just filling them.

A lot of us—including, I dare say, drug store proprietors themselves—would like to see pharmacies divorced by law from their modern ten-cent-store fairy godmothers. Then those who choose to diagnose and treat their own cases could do so at their heart's content via the dime store; those who prefer to have their seemingly "simple ailments" intelligently diagnosed, treated, and prescribed for could patronize the ethical pharmacy where the temptation to counter-prescribe would not exist. There's a good reason why that little thing hasn't already been done: drug store proprietors complain that they just can't make a financial go of a strict prescription business without the help of our $100,000,000 patent medicine colossus. This one fact alone is sufficient to make us suspect that "Pharmacist" has some chestnuts of his own in the fire.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I noticed an "M.D." writing a letter to The Post and would like to make a remark or two.

If I go to a tailor and order a suit, I can call myself cheated should the tailor take a ready made suit that fits my measurements and sell it to me as custom made. If an automobile dealer removes the name plate and identification from a car and sells it as a custom-built for twice its original price, he is guilty of fraud.

I go to a doctor who has spent ten years studying so that he can write a prescription that exactly fits my needs. He writes the prescription of a proprietary medicine in pig Latin. I take it to the druggist who tears off the name of the patent medicine and sells it to me at a higher price than if I had asked for it by the patented name.

It is not ethical in a tailor or automobile dealer, to put it mildly. What is it in a doctor?

I would perfer you not to print my name. A. H.

Men' Surgical.

MIKE'S bed was next to mine. He was a red-headed milkman with a cracked kneecap, a sense of humor, and a healthy appetite. Twice a week regularly he called the floor supervisor in and gave her hell about the food. In addition to policing the ward, Mike settled all arguments and controlled the radio. Occasionally he'd go A. W. O. L., hobbling down the corridor on his crutches and once got as far as the courtyard before our ward nurse captured him.

Then there was old man Morrisey, who had blood poisoning in his leg, and Jimmie Lund with a crushed foot, and Bill Enright whose appendix burst before his operation. Lastly, there was Mike's only dissenter and chief checker-upper, MacPherson.

If you asked MacPherson about his trouble he'd leap into his wheelchair and roll up beside your bed, where he'd talk for 20 minutes. In the end you had a vague idea there was something the matter with his back, although he walked out to the bathroom without the slightest difficulty. Mike, it was, who put the finger on MacPherson.

"MacPherson," Mike revealed, "is an insurance case. He nets $30 each week he stays in the hospital." We kidded MacPherson plenty after that. When the kidding got too hot, MacPherson with injured dignity, would ring for a nurse to help him back into bed where he'd groan horribly until the dinner trays arrived. Then he'd sit up and eat like a lumberjack.

We all felt we earned whatever fun we had in Ward A. Each of us, except MacPherson, had made the trip up to the O. R. at least once. You'd wake the morning of the operation with a dry fear deep in your throat. You watched the nurse bring in the breakfast trays to everyone but yourself; you listened to the chatter of the gang covering up the long silences from your corner. You thought the time would never go; then it went too fast. When the nurse arrived with the high, narrow O. R. stretcher on wheels and helped you onto it, you lay flat without a pillow, your heart hammering like a war drum. When I went up, Mike yelled over to me.

"Listen, punk," he commanded, "be sure and come back! Flowers are expensive."

The comradeship of men is expressed in a strange language. "Don't brag," I snapped. "You never bought flowers in your life—you always stole 'em!" Exchanges like that make a guy feel better when he's in a tight spot.

After evening visiting hours we always pooled our food gifts and threw a bedspread party, lighting old man Morrisey's holy candle so we could see because the nurse had turned our lights out for the night. Mike distributed the food, closely followed by MacPherson in his wheelchair, checking up. One rainy night we had only a few visitors and our food haul was meager. Mike was disappointed. On general principles he began tongue lashing MacPherson for his insurance graft, but quit abruptly when one of his milkman friends drove into the courtyard and sneaked through the side door into Ward A.

"Hell," Mike growled, shaking hands, "I feel O. K. only I'm starving. I'd like a nice, thick steak."

MacPherson sighted. 'Tis a vurra beautiful thought," he said wistfully.

The milkman was a sympathetic person of direct action. "Let's go," he said, and suddenly the ward was very quiet. Then I saw Mike pulling on his trousers, his fuzzy red hair standing on end. I saw MacPherson ease out of his wheelchair and begin dressing. . . .

They got out all right and might have gotten in without anyone ever knowing if a truck hadn't skidded and crashed into them downtown. They came back to Ward A in the ambulance. Mike wasn't even scratched. He climbed into bed under his own power, but they had to wheel MacPherson in. His head and arms were bandaged and we saw that this time he was really hurt, although not seriously. Our night nurse was furious. She tucked us all in without a word, clicked the lights off, and closed the heavy ward door with a thud. The darkness was bulging with questions, but Mike spoke first:

"You walked out of the hospital, MacPherson," he razzed him." You went riding of your own free will. It means you've voided your insurance. You've lost your—er—income!"

I can still remember MacPherson's voice, weak but complacent.

"Ah, weel," he admitted resignedly, "'tis fate pairhaps." He paused. "But that's a fine mon, yur friend, with a vurra special insurance on his car for passengers."

Fair Enough

Il Poverello In A Barrel.

PRELIMINARY studies in the art of sculpture have encouraged your correspondent in his belief that it will be no trick at all to make a better statue than the Bufano smokestack with which it is proposed to deface the natural beauty of Christmas Tree Point in San Francisco.

It turns out that professional sculptors have some rather clever methods of avoiding difficult problems, and it would seem from the sketch of Mr. Bufano's statue of St. Francis of Assisi that he is highly professional in one sense at least. His figure is barrel-shaped up to a point just north of the hips and there with the arms upraised in a plain, tubular "Y," similar to the brass siamese hose-couplings which are placed on the fronts of modern office buildings for the convenience of the fire departments.

Now, feet, legs and the folds of garments present artistic difficulties, and Mr. Bufano has avoided all of them with his tubular effect.

• • • •

HAVING BEEN an apprentice comic artist many years ago, your correspondent detects in this something other than a mere striving for simplicity. Comic artists who cannot draw very well have a practice of drawing their people standing behind a fence, which is not very hard to draw. If he had a pencil and paper your correspondent could show you just what he means. There is a horizontal line, slightly jagged at intervals, like that of a seismographic recording, and a few nail-heads and knotholes are suggested by little o's. The faces of the figures are then drawn above this line, with or without hats, depending on the artist's facility with hats, and a few little sprigs of grass at the base indicate the bottom of the fence. This spares the artist the difficulty of drawing the figures and feet, and even the hands, unless he feels sufficiently confident of his handwork to suggest hands by sketching several sets of little sausages along the top line of the fence. This is the way fingers are made.

Mr. Rube Goldberg, whose work Mr. Bufano may study in the original on the walls of the San Francisco Press Club, is a literal realist who has always made hands in close detail, including the nail on each finger and thumb and the hairs on the backs of the hands.

Your correspondent has tried to follow the Goldberg style as being more honest than that of Mr. Bud Fisher, a rival master of the same period. Mr. Fisher's Mutt and Jeff always wore gloves, even in bed, in swimming and at the table. The gloves were denoted by a line across the wrist and clocks on the backs of the hands. This seemed evasive, and there was a rather harsh artistic dispute for a spell between those young comic artists who held for purity and fingernails had hairs and those followers of Mr. Fisher, who drew gloves.

Mr. Fisher also had a habit of drawing Mr. Mutt vanishing from the panel with a cry of "Awk," with just his shoes and the bottoms of his trousers legs showing. Clever it may have been, but was it sincere?

• • • •

LIKE THE FENCE and the gloves, it was not sincere, and that is another reason for decrying Bufano's St. Francis in a barrel. Anybody can sculp a barrel. Moreover, the newspaper photos of Mr. Bufano's study give St. Francis the appearance of wearing mittens—not even gloves, which at least call for rough outlines of the fingers, but mittens. Would he suggest that St. Francis had a habit of biting his nails?

Now, St. Francis in a barrel and without even a suggestion of toes or fingers is of a piece with those figures behind the fences, but it is only a variation, after all, of an old sculptural evasion in which the figure is immersed in rock up to the knees or thereabouts and is said to be rising from the sea. It takes some work and a glimmer of art, a few wavy grooves, to imply that the unworked rock is the sea, whereas Mr. Bufano has had the gall to model a pipe, barrel or churn, according to one's interpretation of a phase which will rise at least 100 feet above Christmas Tree Point and to offer it as sculpture.

Plagiarism is a grave charge to bring against an artist, and your correspondent offers the following accusation only after the most serious consideration:

Bufano's St. Francis is a shameless steal from a famous old standard art work familiar to millions at home and abroad and instinctively associated with Christmas. The rigid posture, the outstretched arms and the full skirt are unmistakable, and Mr. Bufano is hereby charged with plagiarizing the old baker's design of the wife of the Gingerbread Man.

Truce Talk

Tokyo's Version Of The Third Of The Palavers Leading To End Of Fighting On The Manchukuo-Siberian Border.

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo, Aug. 12.

FOLLOWING IS THE ABRIDGED text of the third conference between Maxim Litvinoff, Soviet Russian Commissar of Foreign Affairs, and Mamoru Shigemitsu, Japanese Ambassador to Moscow, as issued today by the Japanese foreign office:

SHIGEMITSU: "I have reported the contents of our last conversation to my government; that is, the Soviet will assent to cessation of military operations if and when both sides agree not to advance beyond the border or open fire.

"If at the time when the agreement is made any unit on either side happens to be in a position beyond that line they will be ordered to withdraw behind the line designated on the map attached to the Hunchun Treaty (of 1886.)

"In other words, it is proposed to restore both forces to their positions prior to the date of initial hostilities, namely July 29. Re-establishment of said line in the area under dispute is to be undertaken following restoration of tranquillity along the border.

"Does the Soviet mean that in order to eliminate the state of tension caused by the confronting of forces of two countries, the two forces should, first of all, cease operations and withdraw behind their respective lines and promise not to approach the line again?

"Am I correct in assuming also that your statement to the effect demarcation of the border should be undertaken following restoration of tranquillity because it would be very dangerous to do such a thing under the present state of affairs when both forces are confronting one another?"

• • • •

LITVINOFF: "Your statement is in complete agreement with what I said at the last conference. However, what I said then was not along the line indicated by your additional remark.

"I only said the lines designated by the Hunchun Treaty should be recognized, and that there should be no crossing of, nor shooting across lines and I did not say our forces would withdraw from those lines.

"But the Japanese withdrawal therefrom would be welcome. Although Soviet troops were in the district before the incident they never fired toward the Manchukuo side. They did not fire unless fired upon from the other side. As to the boundary, it is not to be demarcated but re-demarcated. There is more or less difference in this point."

SHIGEMITSU: "I understand you have no objection to demarcation of the boundary. However, as it is impossible to realize this purpose while the two forces confront each other, my proposals are designed to solve that difficulty. Therefore, I wish to hear your opinion whether you object to mutual withdrawal of troops to a distance, for example, of one kilometer (⅝ of a mile) from the boundary line to restore tranquillity and thereby begin the work of demarcation."

LITVINOFF: "As I said before, we are opposed to withdrawal of our troops. The area under discussion, being Soviet territory, Soviet soldiers are entitled to stay wherever they please. Since Soviet forces have never attacked nor will they do so, the presence of our forces will not be an obstacle to boundary demarcation."

• • • •

SHIGEMITSU: "Soviet soldiers, of course, can be stationed in Soviet territory and so can Japanese soldiers in theirs. But as it is impossible to demarcate the boundary while the two forces confront each other, I believe it is most practical to remove that condition as a matter of expedience.

"Accordingly, I propose the two forces should cease hostilities by withdrawing about one kilometer from the disputed line so that they will be beyond the range of rifle fire and then begin boundary demarcation.

"It is our earnest desire to settle this unfortunate affair peaceably. As to the details regarding cessation of military operations, they had better be arranged between representatives of the two forces on the spot."

LITVINOFF: "It is acceptable to us that the Japanese should withdraw from the line they now occupy claiming it lies within Manchukuo and that the area thus evacuated will not be entered by either side. But I cannot assent to withdrawal of Soviet troops from Soviet territory at the demand of a foreign power.

"Will you not agree to an issuance of orders to cease operations on both sides as from noon (maritime province time) August 11? It will be necessary to agree also on the question of appointing a border demarcation commission."

• • • •

SHIGEMITSU: "As far as the truce agreement is concerned it should be concluded between representatives of the two forces on the spot."

LITVINOFF: "The agreement can well be reached between the two of us. It is unnecessary to call representatives on the spot."

SHIGEMITSU: "As a matter of practicality, I believe it is necessary for military representatives on the spot to arrange the matter in order to avoid misunderstandings or any unexpected developments."

LITVINOFF: "I have no objection. As for the border commission, it will be necessary to include in it a neutral member to render its work effective. I propose the appointment of two Soviet and two Japanese-Manchukuoan commissioners, plus one neutral arbiter acceptable to both sides."

SCHIGEMITSU: "That is entirely a new question. Discussion of such a matter now not only will complicate the whole problem, but will delay negotiations on the truce. I wish you would withdraw your proposal on this subject."

LITVINOFF: "As for the border demarcation commission I think it necessary to use as a basis for its work the treaty signed by representatives of China and Czarist Russia and maps attached thereto."

SHIGEMITSU: "Does the boundary you referred to mean that one in the Changkufeng area? While I have no objection of course to deliberation on the treaty and maps, I believe it necessary to examine other materials in the possession of Japan and Manchukuo."

• • • •

LITVINOFF: "The boundary to be demarcated concerns as you say the disputed area. Since boundaries are determined by treaties between the parties concerned, I find it difficult to understand what other materials could be taken into consideration."

SHIGEMITSU: "I have no objection to your point that treaties are the most reliable material for reference, but besides these I believe materials bearing on the actual question, such as boundary marks and stones should be assembled and examined by the commission. It is not our intention to minimize the value of the treaty; our stand is that although the treaty is the principal reference material, other materials should by no means be rejected."

LITVINOFF: "All matters not in contravention with the international treaty may be taken into consideration, but wherever they conflict with the treaty the latter should have the decisive authority. Now as regards the truce, I wish to have it settled definitely as soon as possible since the truce is to be declared at noon today."

Reproach To America.

Paris, Aug. 12.

ALTHOUGH Europeans understand quite well why Americans do not wish to be drawn into the fierce disorders of Europe, they do not find it so easy to understand why we are not doing better in our fortunate isolation. Here, they say, is a people occupying an incredibly rich land. A land by no means crowded. A land as yet not fully developed. A people whose frontiers are the great oceans, whose neighbors are friends. The Americans, they say, have received as a free gift from God those very things which Europeans have been fighting about for centuries. There they are—all of them—land, room to move about, the opportunity to make the most of the great traditions of Western civilization, and an invulnerable independence.

And yet, they point out, you are quarreling among yourselves and you do not manage to keep your people prosperously at work. It is a bad way of advertising the democracy you tell us about so often, and if, as we realize, you will not help us to defend freedom in the world, why can you not at least give us a demonstration of what freedom can mean to man? If you will not intervene, why do you not give us the inspiration of an example? Why do you not show among yourselves the common sense and good will for want of which the civilization of Europe may yet be lost and the Dark Ages begin again?

• • • •

THIS IS THE MOST embarrassing reproach that an American abroad has to listen to. For the conventional criticisms that were current after the war are rarely heard these days. No European, for example, pretends to think that Americans are to be blamed because they do not wish to get themselves involved in the feuds of Europe. People over here envy us too much to reproach us for doing what they would do if they could.

But living as they do in the presence of issues that seem almost insoluble by civilized means, they do reproach us for fighting over issues that are entirely soluble with the exercise of a little disinterested intelligence. They reproach us because our muddling tarnishes the ideal for which the peoples of Europe know they may yet have to offer up their lives. And they reproach us because the effect of our muddling weakens the whole economic vigor of the world and weakens them in their tremendous effort to defend themselves.

IF ONLY American politicians, bankers, business men and labor leaders could spend some time in Europe, not as tourists in the hotels, where the visitor is wrapped in wool, and not under the care of official guides, who are trained in the art of keeping the foreigner ignorant, but in the company of men who carry the responsibility and have to make the decisions daily—if only enough Americans could have that experience, they would come back home chastened and with that humility which is the beginning of wisdom. For, compared with the awful anxieties which weigh upon the people of Europe, the awful sense of danger from without and of upheaval from within, American political issues are so simple, so easy, so readily soluble.

One can see why Europe is what it is when no one in France or England can really talk with the guarded, shrouded, deified personages who will decide its fate in Rome, in Berchtesgaden, in the Kremlin. But that Franklin Roosevelt, Harvard, '04, should not be able to come to an understanding with bankers and business men whom he had known since he was a boy—this can mean only that on both sides there is a failure to realize the danger of the world today, and a failure to rise to the responsibilities of the hour.

• • • •

THE WORLD cannot afford the luxury of useless and wholly unnecessary quarreling at the center of the greatest democracy of all. It is as if the officers of a ship working its way through stormy and treacherous seas were to leave the bridge in order to quarrel about whether their meals were sufficiently well cooked.

Our Own Monopoly Inquiry.

Q.—Mr. Quipsey, you are president of the soup trust, are you not?

A.—I'm afraid so.

Q.—And that is the biggest soup producer in the United States?

A.—Yes, unfortunately.

A.—Let's stick to the facts of natural history; an octopus can't produce soup. You're thinking of the turtle.

• • • •

Q.—Never mind what I'm thinking of. How many cans of soup does your corporation sell per year?

A.—Did you say "sell?"

Q.—Yes; did you ever hear that word before?

A.—Not lately.

• • • •

Q.—How many cans of soup, exclusive of tomato, do you sell in a normal year?

A.—I can't remember that far back.

Q.—Isn't it a fact that your company absorbed 15 smaller soup companies during the last 10 or 15 years?

A.—Yes, and we're still wondering whose mistake it was.

• • • •

Q.—You know, do you not, that it is hard for a little soup maker to get anywhere in this country today under present conditions?

A.—It is hard for a big one to get anywhere under present conditions.

• • • •

Q.—Mr. Quipsey, your company's ramifications carry it into close affiliation with the cracker industry, do they not?

A.—A soup man naturally feels a link between him and a cracker man.

Q.—Let us paint this shameful picture in its true colors. Through the fact that soups are made in so many flavors the trust stretches its hairy hand over the tomato industry, over the bean industry, over the corn industry . . .

A.—You're talking a lot of succotash.

Q.—Your control of the ox tail soup trade throttles fair dealing in the ox tail industry, your control of turtle soup forces the defenceless turtle to come in at starvation wages, your control of the national supply of clam showder deprives the lowly clam of the last vestige of self-respect.

Q.—Aren't you asamed by the way you exploit them?

Chairman—Hearing adjourned until 2 p. m. Kindly come back at that time. And bring a midget!

Maritime Union Official Accused As Strikebreaker

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Aug. 12.—Charges that Ferdinand Smith, colored, newly-elected vice president of the National Maritime Union, C. I. O affiliate, of unlicensed seamen, served as a strikebreaker in the 1934 strike of West Coast seamen, were filed today with the Atlantic Coast district council of the union by Patrick Keenan, chairman of the judges of the election announced August 5, and a leader of the "right wing" group in a factional fight which has threatened to split the union in the last few weeks.

According to Keenan's charges, which were said to have been accompanied by photostatic reproductions of the articles of the freighter Horace Luckenbach, Smith shipped from New York on the Luckenbach line vessel on June 23, 1934, and the vessel, with Smith still in the crew, started its return voyage from San Pedro, Aug. 27, 1934.

The vessel, the charges state, entered and sailed from nine strike-bound ports on the Pacific Coast in July of that year, including San Pedro, San Francisco, Portland and Seattle.

Ze Kinng'z Ingleuss

Throughout the World War and perhaps for some time afterward the most of the French people mistook the famous song "Tipperary" for the British national anthem. That misconception, however, has since been corrected, as was evidenced during the recent visit of King George VI to Paris where he and members of his entourage were gratified to hear the true British anthem sung lustily in its original language by French school children.

Later some of them discovered that on the eve of the royal visitation one of the Parisian newspapers had published the following version of the anthem:

God saive aour grechieuss Kinng,
Longg laive aour nobeul Kinng,
Godd saive ze Kinng.
Saind him victorieuss,
Happi and glorieuss,
Longg tou rein oveur euss,
Godd saive ze Kinng.

In Europe's Footsteps

Mr. Roosevelt In Georgia

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT in Georgia went very far. No President ever did anything quite like it before. President Wilson, after Democratic Senators had opposed one of his war measures, issued a bitter statement calling them "a little group of willful men"; but Wilson did not, as I recall, go into the State of any of them to attempt to prevent renomination. When Wilson did a much milder thing, when on the eve of the 1918 Congressional elections he issued a statement in general terms asking the country to elect a Democratic House, the country resented it, returned a Republican House. Yet Wilson had done no more than to put in words what is supposed to be the hope of any President of any party, that the country elect a Congress of the same party.

Doubtless in the old days, before the direct primary came, when nominations were made by State conventions or caucuses and were, therefore much in the control of party leaders—doubtless in those circumstances Presidents may have secretly spoken a quiet word to party leaders suggesting that they use their power to prevent renomination of a Senator the President did not like. Or party leaders, without waiting for any suggestion from a President, may have prevented renomination of a Senator whom they knew the President did not like. But no President ever did anything like Mr. Roosevelt's action in Georgia. It goes beyond his own action in Kentucky.

Mr. Roosevelt in Georgia went the farthest distance he could possibly go. He not only asked Georgia not to renominate a Senator; he named another candidate and asked the State not to nominate him either. Finally, he named the candidate whom he wished, and asked the State to nominate him.

• • • •

ANY NOVEL ACTION is measured by more than the mere fact of the novelty. It is judged in the light of the times. And Mr. Roosevelt must know that the present state of the world makes his action especially dangerous.

Throughout much of the world there is under way a movement toward "one man" government. This authoritarian type of government—in differing forms but all authoritarian, all "one man"—has established itself in Germany, Italy, Russia, and some smaller countries. The fear of infection by this new conception is America's chief present concern. And in the development of the new conception in any country, a fundamental step is first the weakening of the legislative branch, the parliament, followed in due course by the abolition of it. As the "one man" ideal has been expressed by Hitler: "Individual members (of the parliament) may advise but never decide; that is the exclusive prerogative of the responsible President for the time being.'" Toward that one-man conception of government, Mr. Roosevelt's action in Georgia is a plain step.

In addition to the weakening and final abolition of parliaments, the broad preparation and process of introducing the authoritarian form of government consists of breaking down the existing form. And Mr. Roosevelt must know that he is already under grave suspicion of willingness to make breaches in the American form and tradition. His attack upon the independence of the courts is the most conspicuous and well remembered example. It is precisely because Senator George resisted that breach that he is now attacked by Mr. Roosevelt.

• • • •

IF THE BREACHES in the existing form and tradition of government are many enough and go far enough, and especially if the people fail to resist them, the time arrives when the entire existing structure goes down. Thereafter there is nothing ahead except a struggle between the two opposing types of authoritarian government—the Fascist type and the Communist type—to determine which shall seize the seat made vacant by the destruction of the old form.

That is the pattern that has taken place in several European countries. That is the pat[illegible] before America, the path along which America has already gone an alarming distance. If now Mr. Roosevelt succeeds in establishing for himself the power to dictate the membership of Congress, he is likely to be made, by his success, the more disposed to attempt a third term in the Presidency. That step, if it is attempted and succeeds, would be, considering present conditions, a long stride toward the destruction of the American tradition.

It might excuse Mr. Roosevelt in the eyes of some to say he takes a boyish pleasure in destroying precedents. But that explanation cannot allay the concern of those who weigh the effect his breaches of precedent have. Nor can the country escape observing that Mr. Roosevelt's breaches of precedent take prevailingly the form of expansions of his power. Neither can the country fail to observe that the precedent breaking he does in a spirit—if we are to believe those who excuse it—of just harmless, boyish fun, give satisfaction to those who wish to change the American form of society and government. Mr. Roosevelt, by the cumulative effect of his latest breach of precedent, must bring everybody to the hour of decision. Those who continue to support him and at the same time claim they are loyal to the American tradition about government, have a good deal of explaining to do. And explanation which lays all the blame on Mr. Roosevelt's traits of temperament is hardly enough.

'Round And 'Round

By Barnet Nover

The European Treadmill.

IT IS hardly surprising that the current rumors of elaborate and extensive military preparations taking place in Germany should have set in motion a new tidal wave of fear.

The international atmosphere is sultry and oppressive, ominous with lightning flashes and distant thunder. The feeling is growing that almost anything can happen, particularly the worst. Thus, even routine developments of a military nature are capable of bringing on a new crisis of nerves in the Old World. Europe is in a highly jittery state.

How much actual substance there is to the rumors of Germany's preparations for immediate war it is impossible to say. It is no secret that during the past few months the Third Reich has been straining every nerve to complete its chain of fortifications in the west. It is also a fact that the borders along France, Belgium, Czechoslovakia and Poland have been closed to foreigners. And it also appears to be the case that preparations are now under way in the Third Reich for elaborate military maneuvers that are to take place in the very near future.

BUT ALL THESE activities add up to much or little, depending on the motives behind them. They may have no more immediately warlike purpose than, say, the recently concluded French military maneuvers along the Italian border or the intensive rearmament being carried out by Great Britain and all other countries. But it is obvious that they may also have a very much more ominous significance, in view of the fact that the German-Czechoslovak crisis shows not the slightest sign of easing.

There is no evidence that the prospective German maneuvers will be held in the region adjoining the Sudeten Mountains, that is also the Czechoslovak border. On the contrary, so far as is known, these maneuvers will not be concentrated in any one spot but to extend over a large area. But it is easy to see that whether routine or not in inception such a show of German military force can prove a factor of considerable moment in present-day diplomacy.

• • • •

LORD RUNCIMAN has only just begun his mission of mediation. When he left London the other day he made no bones of the fact that he expected his stay in Czechoslovakia to last several months. And since both the German and the Czech governments had given their approval to his mission the presumption is that both sides will take no irrevocable action on the Sudeten problem until after he has completed his labors.

From preliminary indications there would seem to be little likelihood that Lord Runciman can speedily bring the Prague government and the Sudeten Nazis together into some kind of workable arrangement if he can do so at all. But if he can by his presence and by his activities in Prague delay a German-Czechoslavak blow-up for the time being, at least, he will have performed an eminently useful service, the British government believes.

Given time, peace will result. This is London's hope, but whether to suit Britain's wishes Hitler is prepared to allow the German-Czech problem to drag on indefinitely is not so certain. The Fuehrer may decide that he must get what he is after in Czechoslovakia right away since time is on the side of his enemies, and that he must even risk war, if necessary to achieve these purposes. That is why the current reports from Germany of present and prospective military preparations are so acutely disturbing to the rest of Europe.

CHAMBERLAIN is not the only leader who is employing delay as an instrument of policy. There is also Franco. For a month the Spanish insurgent leader has had on his desk the elaborate British plan for the withdrawal of foreign combatants from Spain.

That plan has the approval of all the nations represented on the London non-intervention committee, nations so far apart in their points of view as Soviet Russia and Italy, Germany and France. The Barcelona government has also approved it. But Franco has so far refused to give London his answer. Pressed by the British, he says that he needs more time to study the document; that he may present a plan of his own.

Now it is not difficult to understand why Franco does not like the British plan. Since the end of June the French side of the Spanish frontier has been closed to arms shipments for Barcelona. What military supplies still reach the republican forces do so by sea and the insurgent generalissimo hopes to stop such traffic by persistently bombing vessels entering government harbors. He knows that, for the time being, he can do so with relative impunity—at least so far as Great Britain is concerned. While the British government has repeatedly protested such attacks on its shipping it has shown no readiness to go beyond such verbal representations.

On the other hand Franco is loath to let go of his foreign "volunteers." If his recent action in calling 18-year-old boys to the colors is any indication, he is beginning to suffer from a shortage of manpower at a time when the Barcelona government forces are demonstrating a capacity to take the offensive. Instead of being able to get along with fewer Germans and Italians he needs more of them. That is probably why Franco is stalling for time. But there is an obvious limit to such tactics. Prodded on by the left the Daladier government is threatening to reopen the closed frontier.

And so the Spanish problem, like the Czech problem, appears to be heading toward a new crisis. European statesmanship appears to be on a treadmill. Despite a vast expenditure of energy no appreciable progress is being made in the direction of peace.

Editors Divide On George Repudiation By President

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt's Barnesville, Ga., speech, attacking the candidacy of Senator Walter George, of Georgia, drew the following editorial comment:

New York World-Telegram—"If Georgia's Democrats, by reason of affection for Senator George or of home pride and anti-carpetbagging sentiment, renominate the Senator, it will be said with justification that Georgia has rejected Mr. Roosevelt and his objectives. Mr. Roosevelt himself has asked for a test on that basis."

New York Sun—"It is to be hoped, for the sake of other States as well as Georgia, that Georgia Democrats will now rally to the support of a man who has represented his State long and ably . . . The whip was in plain sight at Barnesville; what will astound the American people is the temper that demands for every display of independent judgment 40 lashes for the least manifestation of a free mind and a free spirit."

New York Post—"The people . . . have a right to have a line drawn between the New Dealers and the double dealers. No less does the President of the United States have a right to make those distinctions and keep those issues clear. That's good politics. It makes for healthy citizenship . . . in Georgia, as elsewhere, the tories will have to travel under their own colors."

Carter Glass Objects.

Lynchburg, Va., Daily Advance (owned by U. S. Senator Carter Glass).—Senator George's statement is more than a challenge to the people of Georgia. It is a challenge to the people of every Commonwealth in the Union. The whole matter boils down to this simple question: Are the people of the 48 sovereign States to select their representatives in Congress or is the President of the United States to perform that duty for them and thereby become a national dictator?

Baltimore Evening Sun.—God bless you, Walter, you are no liberal . . . A liberal is a guy who shuts his eyes, closes his mouth and swallows everything I choose to give him, even including such indigestible items as the crippling of the Supreme Court . . . So I say, Walter, let God bless you. I won't.

Charlotte News—"Probably no President ever went out farther on a limb than did President Roosevelt at Barnesville yesterday . . . as to the right or wrong of it, you can argue either way, according to your prejudices . . . but . . . the thing is in its practical aspect a desperate and precarious gamble . . . if the President wins, it will be a famous victory . . . but the chance is more than even that he won't win . . . and that will genuinely be the 'stunning blow.'"

"Power-Drunk" Executive.

Nashville Banner—"In above terms ("I accept the challenge"), as direct as could be employed, did United States Senator Walter F. George . . . notify the power-drunk Chief Executive . . . that his smiles had not been able to seduce him from the path of duty to conscience and country, so his frowns could neither alarm nor intimidate.

Columbus Ledger—Georgians today have two courses open to them: To follow the President and give him another rubber stamp who will be his representative and not theirs, or to turn a deaf ear upon Mr. Roosevelt's illogical appeal and elect a man who will represent them and not be dictated to from above. Mr. Roosevelt did not enhance the chances of Mr. Camp; he did not damage the position of Senator George. He opened the door for Georgians to think, although he admonished them not to, and the ballots that will be cast on September 14 will tell the story of what a sovereign people want."

New Orleans States—"Franklin Delano Roosevelt, President of the United States, elected by all of the people of this Nation, today takes up a march to the sea where Sherman left off and goes marching through Georgia, telling the people of a sovereign State that they must nominate a candidate he picks . . . What right has Mr. Roosevelt to dictate to the people of a sovereign State how they shall vote?

Richmond Times-Dispatch — Mr. Roosevelt is now out on a limb. . . . He has gone there deliberately . . . to show that the Southern masses are pro-New Deal, despite the anti-New Deal of many of their representatives in Congress. . . . Our guess is that . . . Mr. Roosevelt's diagnosis of the situation is correct, and that Camp will win the three-cornered contest.

Money Trouble Supplies Plot Of Film Play

"RICH MAN, POOR GIRL." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of Edith Ellis' stage play of "White Collars," adapted to the screen by Joseph A. Field and Jerome Chodorov, starring Robert Young, with Ruth Hussey, Lew Ayres, Lana Turner, Rita Johnson, Don Castle, Gus Kibbee, Sarah Padden, Gordon Jones, Virginia Grey and Marie Blake. Directed by Reinhold Schunzel. Reviewed Friday afternoon by Mary Harris, At Loew's Capitol Theater.

Modern Cinderellas may not have glass slippers but they do have glass sensibilities. And that's what makes movies like "Rich Man, Poor Girl," go 'round and 'round.

For Joan Thayer (Ruth Hussey) feels that she cannot marry her wealthy employer-fiance (Robert Young) until he knows her and her family so well that differences in financial and social standing are completely bridged. In other words, she wants understanding before marriage.

This set-up gives the perfect get-off for a series of sure-fire sequences showing the embarrassment and comedy of errors certain when a young millionaire, in however friendly a spirit, invades a Bronx walk-up apartment. Robert even comes to live in the Bronx in his earnest effort to live up to his fiancee's requirements, providing the most elegant fun of the picture as he strives to sleep on the craky living-room davenport—pestered by mosquitoes, the street lights shining in his eyes, the heat and the blaring radio of neighbors. Or is it so funny when you stop to think about it?

Play a Serio-Comic.

Some of the difficulty in evaluating "Rich Man, Poor Girl" arises from the teetering of its theme. It dips into social injustices halfway seriously, wobbles back and indicates that social problems are just a lotta baloney, then winds up the whole business with Pollyanna philanthropy based on romance—meaning that the millionaire sets up his fiancee's family, one and all, in a financial way. But you must have seen "White Collars."

As is the case of so many of our summertime pictures, good acting lends minute-to-minute conviction and gayety to trivial material.

Still, there's a standout in the show—Lew Ayres' performance of the half-baked liberal kid who's always losing jobs, always in a jam, but still has a lot of wrong-headed, stiff-backed pride and a flock of ideas. Lew is not only funny. He produces a definite character, something different from anything he's done before—thus proving that his recent outstanding work in "Holiday" was no flash in the pan.

Music Dominates Stage.

Four out of five of the stage acts go in for melody, with that good trouper, Clyde Hager, standing alone for laughter. When you consider that one of the acts was the Chester Hale Girls, appearing three times, this brings the fun proportion even lower.

Virginia Verrill, most beautiful of radio singers, does beautifully, too, especially with "Swingin' Annie Laurie Through the Rye." The Oxford Boys reaped bountiful applause, scored best with "Mickey Mouse's Birthday Party," which gave them scope for some mighty clever impersonations of Walt Disney characters. Miriam Verne tapstepped with coy comedy coloration. The last was a good idea, but didn't quite jell.

For laughs, the show depended, and well, upon Clyde Hager, late of Billy Rose's Manhattan show, playing a gyp street salesman. Clyde, who's known his way around these many years, grew pretty blue, but continued equally funny.

The Capitol orchestra scored heavily yesterday. The overture was devoted to Victor Herbert melodies, and Max Zinder's direction had just the right blend of sleekness and dynamics.

Metropolitan

"BOOLOO." Paramount picturization of a story by Clyde E. Elliott, adapted to the screen by Robert E. Welch, featuring Colin Tapley, Jayne Regan, Michio Ito, Herbert de Souza, Fred Pullen, Mamo Clark, Claude King, William Stack, Ivan Simpson, Lionel Pape, Clive Morgan, Colin Kenny and Jimmy Aubrey. Directed by Clyde E. Elliott. Reviewed Friday afternoon by Sally Stroud.

If you have been reading the ads for "Booloo," it is suggested that you arm yourself with the family salt cellar before attending it, should such be your intention.

The story is about the strange rites of a strange tribe in the Malayan jungles, a tribe given over to worshiping white tigers and feeding their choice young maidens to the beasts. An intrepid young Englishman sets out to prove the existence of the tribe, etc. For all his pains, he well nigh gets his bloomin' 'ead in a noose of right cunning devising. However, home to England he goes blithely and all is well. Or is it?

Since Frank Buck's camerman is responsible for this film, it is only natural that it should be compared with some of the "Bring-'em-Back-Alive" man's products. The animals in this travelogue aren't brought back alive. In fact, the slaughter is so terrific that it is wanton and repulsive.

If we liked anything about "Booloo," it was the captivating monkeys in ones and twos who popped up all the time, like a tittering Greek chorus. It gave us a fine excuse for laughing like a horse, which is unrefined, but a great relief when viewing something like "Booloo." You may leave off the final syllable and have our reaction to it.

Notable, laudable, laughable is the colored cartoon, "Love and Curses," which has a noble hero named Harold, a fair little gal for him to rescue and a villian who wears yellow gloves and performs dastardly deeds with great vigor.

Floyd Gibbons has one of his true adventure stories, laid this time in Hagerstown, Md., and being all about how a Capt. Holmes turned out to be the Chief Justice some years later. There is also a short dancing specialty which is mildly diverting.

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

Robert Taylor Punches His Way to Hit at Palace; 'Dr. Clitterhouse,' at Earle, Is Smash Melodrama

Star and Supporting Cast Distinguish Exciting Ring Romance.

"THE CROWD ROARS." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of a story by George Bruce, adapted to the screen by Thomas Lennon, Bruce and George Oppenheimer, starring Robert Taylor, with Frank Morgan, Edward Arnold, Maureen O'Sullivan, William Gargan, Lionel Stander, Jane Wyman, Nat Pendleton, Charles D. Brown, Gene Reynolds, Donald Barry, Donald Douglas, Isabel Jewel, Emma Dunn and J. Farrell MacDonald. Directed by Richard Thorpe. Previewed Tuesday, August 2.

Whether or not "The Crowd Roars" was made to graduate Robert Taylor once and for all from the group of pampered matinee idols into the ranks of the rugged "he-men" who can "take it," there can be no question of the power of this picture to entertain any audience up to the limit of its capacity to enjoy fast action and clever plot.

BELL.

The progress of the story hinges primarily upon developments in the prize ring. A youthful choir singer, son of a broken-down vaudeville actor and a patient and long-suffering mother, is tossed into a boys' club ring to win a dollar or two of "throw money" that his blustering dad may filch to buy a few more rounds of drinks for the boys in the back room. The lad comes under the appraising eye of the light heavyweight champion, who coaches him into a classy fighter. The father takes him on the road and squanders every cent the kid earns, always on the pretext of having "something big" in view that will make them all rich.

In time, Tommy McCoy reaches a point where he is matched with his former mentor, attempting a comeback, and kills him with a blow in the ring. Enter the undercover smart boys, who operate in the shadow of Jim Cain, king of the gamblers and a very shrewd guy, who not only double crosses his pals, but deludes his charming young daughter into the belief that he is a prosperous investment broker by keeping her secluded in a fashionable and expensive private school.

Reaches Rousing Climax.

Events finally shape themselves so that when Tommy is within sight of the championship, his father and Sheila both are kidnaped by the ring racketeers to insure his "taking a dive" in the eighth round as a convenient means of "leveling" things with Jim Cain. The rest has to be seen on the screen, rather than in print, to be appreciated for its full worth in the vital matters of bristling action, suspense and a ring battle that bears all of the earmarks of authenticity.

While all this sounds disturbingly like the conventional, run-of-mine prizefight story, it is hedged about with so many clever touches of comedy, romance and pathos that it becomes quite a thing apart, capable of holding the excited attention of all ages and all types of amusement-seekers.

The piece is played with consummate skill by a cast that could not have been more judiciously chosen. Robert Taylor, in the stellar role—initiated in its early sequences by that splendid juvenile actor, Gene Reynolds, the boy radio operator in "Love Finds Andy Hardy"—looks and acts like a real fighter, although opportunity is afforded him to appear as a swanky young man in white tie and tails, as a sop to those who will not wish to see him eternally mussed up by his sparring partners and ring opponents. The role of the father is portrayed at the top of his form by Frank Morgan, who contributes one of the finest portrayals he has brought to the screen as the man who meant well, but was a little too weak to make good until it became necessary to save the reputation of his boy. Edward Arnold was an ideal selection for the part of Jim Cain. No one could play it better than he.

Romance and Comedy.

The romantic interest is sustained by Maureen O'Sullivan, as Sheila, and Jane Wyman, cast as her scatter-brained school chum, who adds effectively to the picture's vein of comedy, primarily intrusted to Lionel Stander, Nat Pendleton and others impersonating the rough-and-tumble gentlemen to be found around the fringes of the fight game.

The production is in every respect Grade A and Richard Thorpe's direction keeps things moving at a swift gait.

Out of deference, no doubt, to Bob Taylor's right hand, Pete Smith dissertates upon the origin and development of "Anaesthesia" among the short subjects at the Palace this week. This short-reel is both informative and amusing. An M-G-M historical featurette also is shown, with Joaquin Murietta as its subject.

The new issue of the "News of the Day" is the final auxiliary of a bill that deservedly "packed 'em in" yesterday, surpassing the first day records of both "Test Pilot" and "Love Finds Andy Hardy."

Star's Hole in One Accident but Okay

Robert Montgomery has made a hole in one "by proxy." While playing with Franchot Tone, Bill Daniels and Richard Thorpe, all of whom are working with him in "Three Loves Has Nancy," the star drove a ball which richocheted from a tree, bounced across the fairway and landed on the green.

Franchot Tone inadvertently kicked the ball, which rolled into the cup.

They had to allow the score and Montgomery was winner for the day. He also entered his name for the hole-in-one club, despite protests from his three companions.

In Hollywood

With HEDDA HOPPER

Hollywood, Calif., Aug. 12.—A few years ago when I played in a picture at Paramount, the driveway in front of the stars' dressing rooms was so cluttered up with superlative shining limousines, it was hard for a mere mortal to squeeze through. There were Marlene Dietrich's, Carole Lombard's, Gladys Swarthout's, Mae West's and Claudette Colbert's.

HEDDA HOPPER

Now one glamour girl remains—Claudette. And she's not what you'd call glamorous in "Zaza," playing a cheap variety actress in a French music hall, and sharing the spotlight with trained fleas and monkeys.

Nothing shifts faster than fame in Hollywood.

The first person I saw when I entered the studio, where I'm in "Thanks for the Memory" with Bob Hope, was Jimmy Vincent, waiting for the arrival of Director George Cukor, so he could say good morning to George's three dogs. For ten years Jimmy was stage manager for Katharine Cornell. Now he's George's assistant.

My first stop was with Dottie Blondell, makeup expert, who knows more about your face in five minutes than you've found out in a lifetime. She performs miracles of surgery with grease paint instead of a knife. On her wall is a large photograph of Mae West, who's written on it, "You made me what I am today." She did, too.

Mae wanted her for her last picture, saying, "No stranger is going to pat this puss." So Dottie made up a chart and Mae did her own patting.

Then on to the set, where Charlie Butterworth and I shook through our first scenes. Neither of us had been before a camera for seven months. We were joined by Jack Norton, the best drunk I've ever seen on the screen.

While watching him, Charlie said, "You know, Hedda, he's so good he's giving me a hangover."

The first visitor was Mr. Anderson, our assistant postmaster, who's lived here 55 years. And this was his first time inside a motion picture studio.

Bob Hope, not working now, came to call. Tried out his act for the Trojanaires. I asked him what the Trojanaires were. "Oh," he said, "we're the guys who get the best seats when the Trojans play, but pay more money."

During the day the heat ruffled the tucks across the tummy of Shirley Ross' dress. To get them out in a hurry, she was put down flat on her back on a bench. An ironing board, a foot wide and 2 feet long, was put under the dress—the tucks were ironed out. So was she.

A 7-year-old flower boy tried to sell me roses as I left the studio my first day. Asked: "Gee, what you playing in?"

"Thanks For the Memory," I told him.

"Dat's a song," he said—and started in to sing "Tanks for De Memory."

"You're right, boy, but it happens to be the name of this picture, too."

I hear Simone Simon has a deal on with R-K-O and will be back in about five months. Also that Claire Trevor will check in at the same studio as soon as the honeymoon is over.

And, contrary to rumor, Walter Wanger will not bring suit for the $40,000 salary advanced to Sylvia Sidney before she refused "Algiers."

Walter's going to shoot his bankroll on "Winter Carnival," an ice-skating story. He'll give students of Dartmouth, his alma mater, a chance to participate. Lot of backgrounds will be taken there instead of bringing the boys out here. A smart move on Walter's part.

Columbia

"WE'RE GOING TO BE RICH." Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of a story by James Edward Grant, adapted to the screen by Sam Hellman and Rohama Siegel, costarring Gracie Fields and Victor McLaglen, with Brian Donlevy, Coral Browne, Ted Smith, Gus McNaughton, Charles Carson, Syd Crossley, Hal Gordon, Robert Nainby, Charles Harrison, Tom Payne, Don McCorkindale, Joe Mott and Alex Davies. Directed by Monty Banks. Reviewed Friday afternoon by Dorothea Lewis.

It probably took England quite a little while to make her, "Our Gracie," but having seen her just this once—yesterday afternoon—we think it would be nice to have Gracie Fields as our "Our Gracie," too.

She's not beautiful and she's not young. She's not spectacular, this Lanceshire Lark, and her first picture to be shown in America is not elegant, but she has a personality and a loveableness that goes right to the heart of her audience—at least it did to this audience. The screen couldn't stop it, the warmth and the spirit. Go see her yourself and see if you can't explain her great charm any better than we are in our fumbling way. You'll come away liking her tremendously as we do.

The picture itself has a number of good features in addition to Gracie. The music is grand (and she sings it grandly), and there is a fine, raw, rugged gusty spirit about its depiction of wide-open conditions in wide-open places in the eighties.

Kit Dobson is a music hall entertainer, successful in her career, but not in her marriage or desire for a home in England. Exiled to the provinces in her capacity as entertainer, she dreams of the day she can return to England with her big, hulking, unemployed husband, whom she adores, and her young nephew. But every time she gets enough money put aside for the trip to Blighty, husband secretly invests it in another get-rich-qquick scheme.

The story opens in Melbourne, Australia, at Kit's farewell performance, and she starts for London and home only to discover that this time she must stop over at Capetown, where hubby has bought a counterfeit half interest in a gold mine. Back to entertaining she goes, working for Yankee Gordon, a much better provider than Dobby. There are jealousies and complications and a climax in a bare-knuckle ring with Dobby very convincing as a brawler.

The scenes in Johannesburg, South Africa, when it was a boom town, with muddy streets and universal fighting and bars on every corner—very much like our San Francisco of a few decades earlier—are interesting and colorful.

The picture is rough and ready, without many surprises in its plot. But it has Gracie and spunk and Vic McLaglen perfectly cast as Dobby (without much chance to act as well as he can), Brian Donlevy, very, very pleasant, indeed, and two good new faces—Coral Browne, a lovely face, but an unpleasant character, and Ted Smith, a tough young English lad. As usual, in English pictures, the minor characters are excellently cast and brilliantly characterized.

Subsidiaries include the newsreel, a short reel made up of newsreel science clips, under the title, "Adventures of the Newsreel," and an atrocious comedy, "Money On Your Life."

Repeats Role.

H. B. Warner, now playing Col. Nielson in "Bulldog Drummond in Africa," with John Howard in the title role, was on the stage in Chicago in a similar role, 12 years ago.

"THE AMAZING DR. CLITTERHOUSE." Warner Brothers-First National picturization of the stage play by Barre Lyndon, adapted to the screen by John Wexley and John Huston, starring Edward G. Robinson, with Claire Trevor, Humphrey Bogart, Allen Jenkins, Donald Crisp, Gale Page, Henry O'Neill, Bert Hanlon, Curt Bois, Ward Bond, Vladimir Sokoloff, Billy Wayne, Robert Homans and Irving Bacon. Directed by Anatole Litvak. Previewed Monday, August 8.

Combining scientific medical research with the familiar problem of criminality, "The Amazing Dr. Clitterhouse" is unique upon the screen. It welds elements of sensational drama that never before have been presented in such perfect amalgamation. It spans the social scale and reveals events that are as fascinating as they are unusual, to reach a climax that is not conclusive but is immensely stirring.

Dr. Clitterhouse is a fashionable and wealthy Park avenue physician with a vast curiosity as to the physical and mental reactions of crooks while actually engaged in their outlawed professions. The idea of composing a vital scientific treatise on the subject of "Crime and Research" takes such a hold upon him that he becomes a thief himself and outwits both the police and his professional rivals in four successful jewel robberies. He is so far above suspicion that Inspector Lane, of the police department, confides to him the identity of the city's most notorious "fence" for valuable stolen goods—one Jo Keller, who turns out to be an icy blonde, who gradually thaws under the warming influence of the doctor's superior intellect and unbelievable cleverness.

From this association, Dr. Clitterhouse becomes leader of the most feared "mob" of big-time jewel and fur thieves that ever gave the authorities the jitters. Through the almost equal cleverness of Rocks Valentine, whom he has deposed as chief of the gangsters, the wily doctor is about to be turned in to his friends the cops when he dispatches Rocks with a poisoned drink. His ultimate crime was a little too much even for so amazing a schemer as Dr. Clitterhouse. He is brought to trial for murder and the picture is brought to one of the most surprising ends that ever added a final fillip to a tense and suspenseful film play.

Comedy Is Unusual.

The abysmal mental gulf that yawns between Dr. Clitterhouse and his new-found associates in crime is made the basis of a continuous flow of comedy that relieves the picture of much if its grim intensity. The taking of blood tests, blood pressures, pulses, stethoscopic records and whatnot, while his underlings are engaged in carting away a fortune in furs, is a source of comedy as well as a large measure of the play's nerve-tingling suspense.

The effect of all this would be largely lost had not "The Amazing Dr. Clitterhouse" been so skilfully cast. Edward G. Robinson makes the title role unfailingly interesting and, believe it or not, astonishingly plausible. Those surrounding him in the pivotal scenes do no less by the expertness with which they assume the dim-witted attributes of a band of muggs operating under the dominant personality of a man they trust—all but Rocks Valentine. In this role, Humphrey Bogart is his old sinister self, with a mental acuteness almost equal to the doctor's. No such perspicacity may be included among the natural endowments of the hard-boiled yeggs impersonated by Allen Jenkins, Maxie Rosenbloom, Bert Hanlon, Curt Bois, Ward Bond, Vladimir Sokoloff and Billy Wayne. They are as amusingly dumb as they are tough.

On the side of rectitude are aligned Donald Crisp, Thurston Ball, Henry O'Neill and John Litel, with Claire Trevor especially effective as Jo and Gale Page further demonstrating her right to be featured in the role of Dr. Clitterhouse's faithful nurse. Anatole Litvak's direction of these gifted players is shrewdly contrived and kept to a brisk tempo.

All-Star Stage Bill.

This week's stage bill at the Earle is as meritorious as the screen feature it supplements. Every act is a hit and some of them are genuine "show stoppers." Foremost in the latter class is that eccentric sextet of instrumentalists and singers known as the "Schnickelfritz Band." The accountrements of their act suggest a disordered junk shop, but out of this motley conglomeration of horns, whistles, washboards, jugs, gas pipes and other claptrap—in addition to their regular instruments—Freddie Fisher, Nels Laako, Stanley Fritss, Chief McKelroy, Paul Cooper and Charlie Koenig wheedle every known type of tune from "jam" numbers to melodious legatos. Their songs go clear back to "A Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight" (1898) and give evidence far beyond anything they showed in "Gold Diggers in Paris" of just what "wows" these boys are.

Next in favor yesterday afternoon came Cass Daley, a cyclonic comedy songstress, who is a sort of magnified combination of Martha Raye, Joan Davis and Judy Canova, with a lot of her own eccentricities added for good measure. The "straight" singing and mastering of ceremonies is done by Harry Stockwell, "the voice of Prince Charming," playing a return engagement and singing in splendid voice. The bill is opened by The Gibsons, a knife thrower, and his handsome human target, and closed by the Stuart Morgan dancers in their hazardous adagio.

ELEANOR SMITH, who is Ben Bernie's secretary, formerly was secretary to Judge Kavanaugh, of Chicago. There she made the acquaintance of the bearded Senator, J. Hamilton Lewis . . . When Bernie played in Washington, Miss Smith went to visit Senator Lewis. He asked her whether she was working . . . "I'm with Ben Bernie," said Miss Smith . . . "Ben Bernie?" the Senator returned. "What does he do?" . . . "He's the famous star of stage, radio and screen," Miss Smith informed. "You know—he has an orchestra." "You mean," was the Senator's eager query, "like Sousa?"

HORACE MacMAHON, the veteran actor, was listening to the complaints of Buddy de Sylva's stepson—who can't get a break in the theater. "Don't become discouraged," the veteran comforted. "Here's what'll happen . . . You'll run around to 30 booking agencies the first year and finally get a part in a show. You'll have one line to say: 'Here's your letter, George' . . . The next year you'll run around to 30 more booking agencies and still get that one-line role to say: 'Here's your letter, George' . . . Then after three years, boom!—like that—you're George!"

RIDING THE SKY LANES between New York and Miami recently was Dick Merrill, rated first among America's transport pilots. Merrill flew to the South Pole to find Lincoln Ellsworth and but for the roll of the dice in the hand of a Broadway gambler might have been the most famous aviator in the world. For if the dice had rolled true on that Miami night, who knows but that the Lindbergh tragedy and all that followed in its wake might never have been . . . Ten years ago when the newspapers announced the Raymond Orteig $25,000 prize for the first non-stop flight to Paris, Merrill was in Miami and confessed his dream to Nicholas Dandelos, sometimes known as Nick the Greek. "How much would you need for the plane and everything?" Nick asked . . . $30,000 . . . the aviator informed . . . They pooled their resources and went to Bradley's Casino, where Nick took his place at the dice table. In a half hour's play almost $29,000 in chips were stacked in front of him . . . before the dice turned wrong to shatter the dream.

JUST BEFORE HE RETURNED to Hollywood, Harpo Marx went to Tiffany's and purchased a cigarette case for his brother Gummo . . . He presented the gift just as the train was pulling out. Gummo examined the case and said: "Look—there's a place here for initials. Why didn't you have my initials engraved there? . . . "Because," Harpo told his brother, "I couldn't think of the name!"

RKO-Keith's.

"Letter of Introduction" enters its second week at RKO-Keith's Theater with no diminution of public interest in the hilarious buffoonery of Charlie McCarthy, Mortimer Snurd and their mentor, Edgar Bergen, or in the fine, serious work contributed to an extremely well-wrought and well-acted picture by Andrea Leeds, Adolphe Menjou, George Murphy, Rita Johnson, Ernest Cossart, Ann Sheridan, Eve Arden and the other members of the competent cast.

The story is one of theatrical ambition, as it manifests itself in a New York theatrical boarding house, and the major heartaches and minor triumphs that come to a girl whose father fails her in a crisis. "Letter of Introduction" is a fine example of the manner in which unbridled fun may be combined with somber tragedy to best advantage.

An extra added attraction this week is the new issue of "The March of Time," which divides interest between the two subjects—"The Man at the Wheel" and "Threat to Gibraltar." "The Man at the Wheel" is in the interest of safety on our motor highways, and "Threat to Gibraltar," a summation of the international problems that have caused Great Britain anxiety in the Mediterranean. Both are executed with the intelligent directness this documentary film always brings to its expositions of vital topics.

"Going Places," Walt Disney's "Polar Trapper," starring Donald Duck, and the Pathe News complete the program.

Bette Gets Bath From Stunt Man

For her part in "The Sisters" at Warner Bros. studio, the star wears the kind of corsets her mother wore.

The tight garments made her so stiff and sore that Miss Davis found she could barely walk after wearing them all day. Turner, working in "The Sisters" between stunts, gave her his recipe for curing stiffness—a 15-minute bath in very hot water to which a box of bicarbonate of soda is added.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Engaged to Be Married, With Love for Fiance Blowing Now Hot, Now Cold, Girl of 20 Asks Advice.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am 20 years old and engaged to be married. Before I promised to marry the young man we had been going steady and when he asked me, I told him I loved him, as I thought then that I did. Since that time, I have felt that I do not love him. One night I told him I wasn't sure I loved him, and asked him if I could go out with other boys for the next six months, so that by the end of that time I might know whether or not I loved him.

* * * *

He was terribly hurt and said he was leaving town that night. The thought of losing him frightened me—so much that I begged him not to leave, and told him I really did love him and didn't care about going out with anyone else. He finally agreed to stay, and for the next couple of days I felt that I loved him. But now the old feeling of indecision has returned. But I am sure if I tried to tell him again, it would be the same old scene all over.

* * * *

Should I take a chance on telling him? Or should I say nothing and hope that eventually I will outgrow the feeling of not being sure? All I want is a chance to find out for sure what is wrong. At times I am positive I love him, and other times I feel just the reverse. I want to be fair with him and also fair to myself. You may think this letter ridiculous, but please try to understand and advise me as I need help terribly.

LILLIAN.

The Saving Course.

DEAR LILLIAN: One more scene like the last and if the young man has any spunk at all, you are pretty sure to lose him, but that, in my opinion, would be for the best in the long run. It seems rather plain that you are not in love with him. You like him as a friend and, at times, out of sheer youthful emotional exuberance, and possibly because of some qualities of attractiveness he has, are infatuated with him. But you are not deeply and satisfyingly in love with him in a way that would warrant marriage, or you would know it beyond the shadow of reasonable doubt.

* * * *

In my opinion, he reacted rather childishly in threatening to "leave town that night," when you urged the necessity of a program of action that would enable you to know your own mind. Any man who would react so hysterically isn't sufficiently mature, in matters of emotional balance and self-control, of reason and understanding, to be able to hold up his end of marriage. Marriage requires a great deal of "bearing and forbearing," whereas his conduct amounted to that of a sulky child who takes the attitude of "You'll be sorry when I'm dead."

* * * *

And your attitude was equally immature in clutching at his coattails when he threatened to leave. I think that, primarily, you were shocked, astonished and aggrieved to discover that you didn't hold the whip hand in the situation; that there was a probability you might lose your "steady boy friend" through your own indifference. I think your alarm was more for your pride's than for your heart's sake. You thought, for a startled moment, that life would be appallingly empty without him—and so it would have been, until you had gotten busy and compensated for his loss. But as I see it, he has become a habitual social necessity to you, rather than a necessity of the heart or spirit.

* * * *

As I have said, to re-introduce a motion to see other men is to risk the loss of this boy as friend, suitor and fiance. His temperament being what it is, he will undoubtedly grab his hat and stalk out into the night, threatening never to see you again. And he just might keep his word, but I doubt it. If you have other admirers to choose from, and he knows it, and if you immediately embark on a lively social whirl (and he learns of it, as he probably will, since he will be watching you out of the corner of his eye, figuratively speaking) and if he really loves you enough to wish to marry you, he won't give you up so easily. He'll be back in a week's, or a fortnight's or a month's time, cepting a compromise arrange- asking for another chance and acment.

* * * *

Since you are wretchedly unsure of your feeling for him and wish to be fair to yourself and to him, there is only one thing to do, and that is continue seeing other men of contemporary age until you know for a certainty just what—or who—of a sacrifice of the happiness and you want. You are making too much good times that properly belong to youth in continuing in an exclusive sweethearting association that leaves you so disheartened and dissatisfied.

Beauty Factory Of Movie Stars Works Miracles

Voice, Posture, Carriage All Transformed in Finished Product.

By Ida Jean Kain.

HOLLYWOOD IS a beauty factory which turns the girl who is passing pretty into a finished product with box office appeal. Before she has been refinished, the same pretty girl could walk down the street without creating a ripple of excitement. Afterwards she can tie up traffic!

What's the difference? She is not the same girl. She has what she started out with, but much more, and this plus quality which puts her above the average is something she has acquired in the refinishing process. Perhaps it is a new confidence that gives her the poise of a screen princess, but more than likely just plain exercise is one of the main things in this transformation.

All of this does not happen overnight. Sometimes the young screen hopefuls work for six months on posture, walk, figure and voice before they are ever granted a test, and once a career is started there must be no let-down in the struggle for self-improvement—the competition won't allow it!

Posture Emphasized.

The first thing the young screen player is taught is to stand and walk correctly. Most newcomers to the films have anything but a beautiful walk. At the Twentieth Century-Fox studio, Florence Enright takes these girls in hand and they are taught to walk with one foot placed directly ahead of the other, and to think only of the stomach—it is up, up, up with those tummy muscles! The uplift of the tummy takes care of everything and shoulders and head may be forgotten. As a matter of fact, Miss Enright never stresses "shoulders back," for it produces a rigid and awkward posture, but gradually the girls learn to walk naturally with the shoulders back and relaxed, and with the hands back of the hip.

There is only one exercise for the development of bodily poise, and that is the squatting exercise for a straight back, flat tummy, and balance. See if you can do it. Place the hands on the hips with the elbows back and stand with the feet together. Rise on the toes and bend the knees until you are in a squatting position—without toppling over. Keep the back perfectly straight.

Many Poor Voices.

Surprisingly enough, most of the young screen actresses undergo intensive voice training. The average American woman, Hollywood tells us, does not have the pleasing voice that is so essential to real charm. Different sections of the country, Miss Enright says, seem to produce their own voice defects. In the Midwest it is the harsh "r," in the South a tendency to laziness and slurring of the syllables, and in New England a too incisive precision and monotony. She praises the Midwestern voice, however, for its clear phrasing, color and naturalness. From the standpoint of the screen nothing is worse than the artificial voice, and the quality of naturalness must be kept constantly in mind.

That is only a sketchy outline of the program followed by the average young screen player bent on a successful carreer. Such an exacting routine might not turn you into a raving beauty and probably you do not want a screen career, but it will make you stand out from the crowd.

Old Millinery Favorites in Modern Guises

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Aug. 13.

NOTHING like a spot of variety in eating places, especially when the dog days reduce us to the lowest common denominator of human misery. That's why I enjoyed the quick shift of the past week. One night a lobster dinner at a small unswanky Cape Cod summer hotel. Twenty-four hours later costly grub (on the cuff) at New York's lushest roof—the St. Regis Hotel's, presided over by Prince Serge Obolensky, the handsome master of ceremonies for the silken set.

ALICE HUGHES

The spouse and I ballooned up there one night by special invitation, he looking very beautiful for his age in speckless white linen and his clean, or Sunday, shirt. And for all his loveliness the maitre d'hotel leaned over and whispered, "Dancing is formal, sir." That will give you an idea of the St. Regis, even on the hottest of nights. We began the groceries with vichyssoise soup, certainly the most delicately flavored warm-weather fluid. When we were working on the pink ice cream, the band stopped playing Strauss waltzes and the "I Married an Angel" music and went into the new dance which the good old prince recently brought back from England. It is called "The Lambeth Walk," and is a sort of gentle and refined Big Apple for the toffs, swells or gentry. And truly, it is a very cute dance. Most of it is a sort of springy, rhythmic walk around the floor, broken every now and then with a modest all-hands-round, or a few sprightly bows. It's easy to learn, nice to watch, and probably mildly amusing to do.

Obolensky and Gertrude Lawrence led the revels, and others Lambeth-walking were Dorothy Mackaill, Helen Wills Moody (imagine that!) Gloria Swanson and Richard Cromwell. Not of course, Aunt Alice and her impediment. He was beautiful, but not "formal." Maybe the kids won't go for the Lambeth Walk, because insanity is not necessary to its performance, but it is mighty ca-yute.

* * * *

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Tyrone Power, the beauty boy, had lunch at the St. Regis with four men and one unidentified girl who wore a green hat. The hotel took Ty in its dignified stride, of course . . .

* * * *

Maggie, the magnificent collie who belongs to my sister and her husband, right next door, threw Murray Hill into a turmoil the other day by presenting the family with no less than eight pups. Unhappily, the children do not possess Mag's unsullied blood, since they are the result of one of these flighty summer romances with a handsome police dog at a resort upstate, where my sister was restoring her tissues. But Maggie is very proud and happy—not realizing that nine dogs in a small New York apartment is utterly impossible.

* * * *

The perfect writer seems to be my friend, Rex Stout, thinker-upper of Nero Wolf, the fat detective. Visiting the Stout farm at Brewster to get reports of his Pola's recent trip to her home in Poland, I found Rex working in a tent on the grounds—since there is a new and very vocal baby in the family. He's doing a serial with a Reno background, and when I looked at his copy I found it absolutely flawless—no mistakes, no exing out, no interlining. And that perfect first draft, if you please, is the way the stuff goes to the publisher! What-a-man Stout!

* * * *

The other day the local American Legion post named for him held a memorial service for Joyce Kilmer, the poet whose name became famous because of his one little lyric, "Trees." It was held on the twentieth anniversary of his death in battle. Strange how one tiny piece can cake make a name live. He wrote some other beautiful things. My spouse's favorite soldier-poem is Kilmer's "Prayer of a Soldier in France," yet that is forgotten by all but a handful who remember and love it.

Arden has just turned loose what she hopes will be the fall's favorite lipstick and nail polish color. Calls it "sky-pink." Yeah?

* * * *

Local stores this month are taking a slightly new tack in their advertising, and it's worth watching. Instead of bearing down on the prices for their August sales, they are spending most effort and space in clearly describing the merchandise for prospective customers. Quality, fashion-worth, workmanship are stressed. "Prices speak for themselves," one executive told me. All of which makes very sound sense to me. How about it?

Milady's Hats Soar Skyward In Fall Styles

By Katherine Vincent.

THE MILLINERS have made up their minds to make pixies out of us this autumn, or know the reason why. Perilous peaks will soar skyward, held on by cozy snoods, and feathers will shoot up like geysers from unexpected places.

Meditate and pray or, at least, make sense before you leap for that first fall hat—it can make or break you. Remember the first rule: Is it becoming to me? Pay no attention to the salesgirl's Oxford accent when she raises her left eyebrow and says, "Schiaparelli introduced the toy hat, madam; very smart, indeed."

Step Too Far.

We are inclined to think that Schiaparelli went a step too far with the toy hats, even though she planned them for the new high coiffures. Schiaparelli is a brilliant designer, but she doesn't always understand us completely. We admit we are difficult, but time marches on, and American women are busy these days running homes and jobs, and the fashion for dolls is passe.

"Merry Widow" hats are in, with sweeping brims and graceful plumes swirling offside — perfect for a breath-taking entrance if you can look unconcerned. Silk jersey and chiffon will drape around your lily-white throat, and long, meshy veils will do tricks under chins and over crowns.

Our little feathered friends nestle in whole families on velvet pill-box hats, and felt saucers have velvet ribbons that tie in back and fall over your curls in streamers.

Trend Toward Extreme.

Fur combined with bright suede, felt and velvet will be with us, too; to say nothing of suede all by itself in contrasting colors.

As to size, there is a definite trend toward the extreme—either very large or very small—but if you're of a mind to have a medium-sized hat, it can be done, and very elegantly, too. There are berets with all sorts of new twists and turns, lady-like tricornes, and softly pointed Tyrolean felts with brims that cover your brow and shade your eyes. The good old Breton sailor appears, too, in dressy or tailored versions. So be of good cheer; it won't be hard to find just the right hat for your particular type of beauty.

Powder for Hairline.

Blonde Vicki Lester, movie actress, has discovered that a dark powder or powder base can actually tint light hair. If you prefer a suntan powder, carefully avoid carrying it into the hairline.

"Perfectly marvelous! How'd you like the Rockies?"

"I'm mad about 'em—wait, I've got some snapshots——"

"So have I—right here——"

"Now here's a shot we took of Pike's Peak. That's me and that's Ed——"

"Who's Ed?"

"Oh he was a fellow I met at the lodge."

"He's right cute."

"He was awfully nice. Of course he wasn't as good looking as Paul——"

"Who's Paul?"

"Oh I met him in Denver."

"Did you like Denver?"

"I'm mad about Denver. You know Western men are so different—"

"There was a Western man on the boat to Bermuda. I've got a snapshot——"

"The place I adored though was Colorado Springs. Say did you ever hear of a man named Sanford Buffington?"

"No, who's he?"

"I met a man from here in Bermuda. Honestly Bermuda's the most marvelous——"

"I could live forever in Estes Park. If you could just see the view—wait, now here's the hotel and that's me and that's a Mr. Simperson I met there——"

"Did you like him?"

"Pretty well. He was a little old. He got an awful crush on me though. He said he worshiped the ground I walked on."

"You must have had a marvelous time."

"I did. And then I had such an interesting train trip."

"I like a boat better."

"Well, I thought the train would be tiresome. But the country was so terribly interesting. And then Mr. De Vasher pointed everything out——"

"Mr. De Vasher?"

"Yes, he was a man I met on the train. He must have had a lot of money from the way he talked."

"I met a big oil man in Bermuda——"

"Oh, say, tell me all about your trip to Bermuda."

"Well, I had a wonderful time in New York first—that was where I met Pete——"

"Pete?"

"Yes, he's got a big job of some kind up there and he showed me everything, and then he put me on the boat——"

"It must have been fun to ride on a boat."

"It was marvelous. That first morning I met a Mr. Van Zitter who pointed everything out to me."

"Yes, go on."

"And that night I met Joe—he was a marvelous dancer. Here we all are. Here's me and that's Joe and another girl and a fellow named Ernest——"

"It must have been terribly interesting."

"It was awfully educational. Here's Mr. Van Zitter and me again and Mr. Pinchbeck—another fellow I met."

"Did you like Bermuda?"

"I'm mad about it. Who should I meet that first day but this fellow from home, this Mr. Watershedd. Then the second day I met this big oil man and he simply showed me everything."

"The scenery must have been marvelous."

"It was. And then the third day who should I run onto but Ernest and Mr. Van Zitter! And then I met a terribly interesting fellow from New York—he's a big engineer or something and that helped me get so much more out of the trip."

"I bet you hated to come back."

"I should say so—but then I learned an awful lot from it."

"Well, I always say travel is an education in itself."

Earless Dog at Cathedral, Littered Public Grounds Only a Few.

By Margaret Wallace

A BROKEN EAR on the little marble dog adorning the recumbent tomb of Bishop Alfred Harding in the Chapel of the Resurrection, Washington Cathedral, is a mute witness to the manners of some visitor to that shrine who wantonly broke off the piece for souvenir.

With millions of visitors coming to Washington yearly, the proper behavior when visiting historic places is of supreme importance.

The first and most important rule is, of course, not to touch any object, even if it does not bear a sign to this effect. Good manners dictate this attitude anyway. The wise mother always instructors her children, when going into the homes of other persons, not to handle objects of any kind without the permission of the owners. This type of home etiquette carried into the outside world should prevent visitors from touching or harming the many valuable and historic objects that make Washington a mecca for sightseers.

Reports Disregarded.

Attendants and guards in public places should be addressed politely at all times. This rule is all too often violated by visitors. To hear some of the remarks made to the defenseless guardians of Washington's treasures gives one an intimate glimpse of how lacking in the education of our young people is simple politeness, not only in the home, but outside of it as well. Personal remarks on the ability of the guards, their attention to duty and threats to report some fancied oversight to one's Congressman only makes the speaker ridiculous.

In passing, it might be noted such remarks are not in the least alarming to the official in question. He knows too well that such reports are disregarded when placed against his known adherence to duty and orders.

It is very bad manners, too, to bring one's lunch along and expect to make a beautiful public building or historic spot a picnic ground. Eating in public buildings is strictly forbidden, of course. Despite this fact and the warning of guards, peanuts, sandwiches and candy are devoured by sightseeing parties.

Girl Scouts at Work.

There is no rule against eating food in public parks. Here a few rules of common decency and behavior stand one in good stead. Do not strew the grass or ground with the debris from your lunch. Some years ago it took large gangs of men each year to clean the White House lawns after the annual Easter egg rolling there. The children, undeterred from any admonition from their parents, threw egg shells and pieces of food on the velvety lawns.

In recent years the Girl Scouts have shown a good example and persuade the children at the Easter egg rollings to put egg shells and other debris from their Easter baskets and lunches into convenient receptacles, placed throughout the grounds.

"Pickers" Anathema.

One of the trials in the public parks and gardens of the Capital is to keep visitors from picking flowers or breaking branches from flowering trees. When caught they exclaim: "Oh, it was just one leaf." Should they admit, "It is just my bad manners," they would be much nearer the truth.

Visitors seldom seem to remember that if each and every one of them took "just one leaf" the trees would soon be denuded of their foliage.

Earrings Stage Comeback, Paris Stylist Reports

Earrings are the "big news" in fall jewelry fashions, according to Charlotte of Paris, stylist and designer, who reports the increasing importance of ear embellishments.

"Upswept coiffures and tiny hats are concentrating attention upon the head as never before," she cables. "As a result, the smartest women of Paris are wearing earrings for every occasion, during all hours of the day."

For sports and general daytime wear, earrings of gold or silver in simple designs that follow the contour of the lobe are favorites. But with the luxurious evening fashions, glittering stones are used in elaborate designs. And while the small, lobe type of earring is still most widely accepted, fashion leaders who set the styles others follow, are wearing long dangling earrings of indisputable glamour.

Rust and Violet Preferred Shades In Paris Salons

Paris, France.—A host of new shades, introduced for fall and winter, for both day and evening wear, include Mainbocher's rich rose red, called "party red," "immodest violet," Lelong's "titian auburn," "ocean blue" and "elephant gray."

Rust shades are shown by Patou in light and dark Carnelian, as well as by Heim and Creed. Violet is sponsored by all designers and heliotrope is another favored shade.

Schiaparelli's "aurora borealis" shades open new horizons, while Mainbocher's "dream mauve" and "cherub pink" must be added to cyclamen and cerise which, combined with black or with one another, are still good.

Premature Old Age Described in Study

Undernourishment brings premature old age to the young women of Dudar, a Transdanubian village in Hungary, according to a study of peasant life in The Hungarian Quarterly, issued by the Columbus University Press.

"The young women are pretty almost without exception, and in some cases really beautiful," says the study. "Their good complexions are too soon, however, replaced by skins toughened and much wrinkled by constant exposure to the weather. Their eyelids become red and swollen, a feature of undernourishment, and their youthful attractions are lost in the dignity of suffering. They manage to retain a gaiety of manner which is touching in its sincerity."

Learn Dancing at Home

And a few weeks later—envied John and Joan doing the tricky rumba with grace and ease. Home lessons with simple instructions and diagrams have showed them how.

Most clumsy dancing, they found, is due to bad posture How girls dread the man who leans stiffly backward. They can't tell when he'll take forward steps and they can never get away from under his feet in time!

And how men dread the girl who drapes herself on her partner's chest, has to be pushed around like a sack of meal. If she only could see the way she looks to the stag line!

Dance erect—but relaxed! Keep the weight evenly balanced on the balls of the feet.

Easy to give a forward lead with a forward motion of the body. And the girl who's light on her feet, who knows the trick of long backward steps, needn't fear the menacing feet of any partner.

As for smart dance steps, you can quickly learn them from diagrams. Try the basic rumba steps.

With a little practice you can do it real rumba style—swaying hips as you shift weight from one foot to the other.

Other popular steps you learn as easily. Our 40-page booklet, "Social Dancing Self-Taught," diagrams basic steps and variations for waltz, tango, rumba, fox-trot, shag, Suzy-Q, truckin'. A complete home course by a well-known teacher.

Send 15 cents for our booklet, "Social Dancing Self-Taught," to The Washington Post Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Cape Cod's Cool Spell Holds Siam's Minister

Envoy and His Wife Find Shore an Alluring Haven From Heat.

Still among the many from Washington who are finding it the better part of comfort to stay around the Massachusetts North Shore until the mercury settles down to par are the Minister of Siam, Phya Abhibal Rajamaitri and Mme. Rajamaitri, who have been settled at Osterville, on Cape Cod, Mass., for lo, these many sultry weeks. At present they have with them as their guest for the month of August the Minister's brother, Phya Supan Rajamaitri.

Capital society will have to forego his presence at receptions at the legation this winter, however, for he plans to be off to his native country as soon as his visit with his brother and sister-in-law is ended.

This is the Rajamaitris' second summer on the North Shore, and they are finding their calendar full of parties being given for them by friends vacationing in that vicinity. Recently they motored to Woods Hole to be guests of honor at a tea given by Dr. and Mrs. Hugh M. Smith, who met them in Siam. Among the many who gathered for cocktails at the fete were Dr. and Mrs. Edward B. Meigs, of Washington, who wisely have ensconced themselves at Woods Hole for the duration of the season.

Miss Nancy Leiter Wins Sailing Trophy

Earlier this summer, Miss Nancy Leiter came right out in the open and declared with practically no hesitation that she would much rather sail a boat of her own than sit at the captain's table on the Normandie or the Queen Mary. Recently she proved that she knew exactly what she was talking about. With a brisk wind flaunting itself off Marblehead, she set out in her craft, Venture, to win a three-minute victory over Charles Francis Adams, formerly of Washington. The event took place in conjunction with Race Week at Marblehead and Miss Leiter, when she finally returns to Washington, will have a trophy to put on the front parlor mantle at Dupont Circle.

It will be recalled, of course, that Seaman Charles Francis Adams was at one time Secretary of the Navy, and this fact makes Miss Leiter's feat all the more interesting. He is staying now at his place, The Glades, at Cohasset. Last year Mr. Adams topped the season championship with his boat, Thisbe, and in addition to everything else, he was formerly commodore of the Eastern Yacht Club. Not an easy man to beat, but Miss Leiter up and did it.

"Monte Carlo Night" Draws Washingtonians

There were big goings-on last evening at the Bass Rocks Golf Club at salty Gloucester when Monte Carlo Night took place. Everybody all up and down the North Shore was out to take a whirl with the roulette wheels and a fling with beano. With Miss Ann Barr, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lester A. Barr, of Washington, as one of the members of the committee, the festivities began and ended with a bang.

Today Mrs. J. Warren Merrill, of our town, will step into the role of patroness for the annual three-day exhibition of the North Shore Horticultural Society. The blue ribbon flowers will begin blooming today and continue on through Monday at Horticultural Hall at Manchester-by-the-Sea.

After tramping de luxe for the last two months through Europe, Mr. and Mrs. T. Jefferson Coolidge, who formerly made their home in Washington, have opened their summer residence at Coolidge Point, near Boston. Mrs. Coolidge's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William S. Kuhn, are expected to arrive early in September from San Mateo, Calif., for a visit. They will occupy a house near their grandchildren, Miss Catherine Coolidge and young T. Jefferson Coolidge, jr.

Among Washingtonians who were recently wined and dined by Mr. and Mrs. James M. Green, of this city, at the Oceanside at Magnolia, were Mrs. Eva W. Hayes, in whose honor a party was held. Others among the guests from the Capital included Col. Eugene R. West, Mr. and Mrs. Arlon W. Cushman and Mrs. Adam Wyant.

Krebs, all of Washington. Mrs. Stephen Tabor and Mrs. Clarence Smink, of Baltimore, will also assist.

Laural Park Farm, a show place in this part of the country, with its 374 acres, its many paddocks, and outdoor mile race track, was pictured and written about last autumn in Life, Vogue and Spur magazines. Perhaps the most notable feature of the whole estate is the indoor stable and indoor race track. It contains 82 stalls around which is the track, the whole of it glass enclosed.

The house itself is an enormous old Colonial brick structure, covered with green, clinging ivy. Inside the rooms are big and comfortable with high ceilings, and with the drawing room, dining room and library all opening out into the spacious Colonial center hall. The Hutchisons' winter home is 3201 Garfield street, Washington.

Legion Auxiliaries' Convention Opens Here With Boyce-Fraser Romance in Spotlight

Business Meetings Begin Today With Report on Resolutions.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Romance "stole the show" at the department convention of the American Legion Auxiliary last night at the Carlton Hotel. The presentation of a set of naval print plates to Miss Hazel Boyce, secretary of the D. C. Department of the American Legion, and her fiance, Fred Fraser, national Chef de Chemin de Fer of the 40 and 8, was the climax of the program for the opening session.

Mrs. Dorothy B. Harper, department president, presided and the presentation was made by Gen. Frank T. Hines. Miss Boyce, who has been secretary at the headquarters of the D. C. Department of the Legion for ten years, will be married to Mr. Fraser Monday, September 5, at 9 o'clock in St. Paul's Catholic Church. Her maid of honor will be Miss Nell V. Creagh, who was a yeomanette during the war and is now the only woman member of the Kenneth Nash Post of the American Legion. The best man will be John H. O'Connell, past commander of Costello Post of the legion and past grand chef de gare of the District of Columbia 40 and 8. Mr. Fraser's ushers will all be legionnaires and all will wear the uniform of the organization.

Even the wedding trip he and his bride plan will be linked with the legion. They will first go to Canada and, after a stop at Banff and Lake Louise, will go to California to attend the national legion convention at Los Angeles, September 19-22.

Resolution Proposes Memorial Auditorium

Election of department officers tonight and a resolution proposing the erection of a national memorial auditorium in the District of Columbia will be the highlights of the business session of the department convention. A luncheon will be held at 1 o'clock this afternoon with Mrs. Frederick C. Williams, a past national president, as honor guest and speaker, followed by a business meeting at which nomination of officers will take place.

Only two candidates are in the field for the office of department president, Miss Minnie May Hardy of the Treasury unit, and Miss Lillian Reagan of the Henry C. Spengler unit. It is expected to be midnight or after before the election results are announced.

Last night's convention session opened following the processional of department officers and honor guests.

Dr. Overholser Speaks At First Session

Dr. Winfred S. Overholser, of St. Elizabeths Hospital, made the chief address of the evening, telling of the work with veterans there, and there was also a talk by Mrs. A. H. Hoffman, of Des Moines, Iowa, national chairman of constitution and by-laws, in connection with the dedication of the new department colors. She was assisted in the dedication ceremonies by Mrs. Mary B. Corwin, program chairman, and Mrs. Olive Smith Carpenter.

The Florence M. Campbell FIDAC award was made to McGroarty unit.

Mrs. Edith Quinn, chairman of membership, presented the membership trophies. The Mary K. Killeen senior trophy was won by Sergt. Jasper unit; the Mary K. Killeen junior trophy by Cooley-McCullough unit; the individual membership awards given by Mrs. Quinn, went to Mrs. Harper, department president, and Mrs. Ethel Wilt, of Kenneth Nash unit; that given by Miss Minnie May Hardy as department vice president, went to Costello unit; that given by Mrs. Helen McCabe, also department vice president, to Washington Police and Fire unit, and that by Mrs. Katherine Waters, another department vice president, to Jasper unit.

Other winners in the steeplechase were Washington Police and First Unit; Sergt. Jasper and Cooley-McCullough units. The presidents and membership chairmen in these units were awarded individual prizes by Mrs. Harper.

Certificates from the national organization went to Potomac and Washington Police and Fire units.

Madame Chairman

By Suzanne.

DESERTING her regular mount for an "iron horse," Mrs. H. Trendley Dean, of Arlington, a member of the District of Columbia Branch of the National League of American Pen Women, last night embarked for a trip to St. Louis, riding part way in the engineer's cab of a new Diesel engine on the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad.

She left Washington at 6:30 p. m., sitting back in the fireman's seat of the locomotive. E. M. Heflin was the engineer on the run, and E. A. Watkins, the fireman. Mrs. Dean, who not only enjoys occupying the "front seat" of a railroad train, but likes to write about her experiences, was attired just as she would have been for a journey in the parlor car. She wore a green linen two-piece suit, a green and white halo hat and white slippers and gloves.

On another occasion, when she traveled on a steam locomotive, she was obliged to dress for the trip in a riding outfit, such as she wears for her canters on the back of Fianna Fail, a Field Artillery officer's mount, she rides daily. But last night the spotless interior of the streamlined Diesel engine promised to be just as kind to a fair passenger's white gloves as a limousine would be.

* * * *

MRS. DEAN described her first ride aboard a locomotive in a feature article, "Riding Iron Horse," which was awarded first prize this year in the annual feature story contest conducted by the District branch of the League of American Pen Women. Albert Attwood, of Washington, widely known magazine writer, judged the contest.

* * * *

THE THRILL of this ride will be going over the mountains, looking ahead as the engine rushes downgrade and speeds around curves with a swiftness scarcely realized by the passengers who ride securely in the cars behind. In contrast to this mountain trip will be another she plans aboard the "Abraham Lincoln" from St. Louis to Springfield, Ill. This will take her across the plains and over the Mississippi River in an engine of the same design.

She will spend several days in St. Louis and go from there to Springfield and Chicago, then to New York before returning home.

* * * *

ANOTHER "iron horse" story will be the outcome of her two rides, written probably for a boys magazine.

Her most recent magazine article was one entitled "Front Royal," about the U. S. Remount Depot. It appeared in last month's issue of "Riding Magazine," a country life publication in London. She rode Fianna Fail all over the post most of the time with the reins in her teeth and pad and pencil in her hands as she took notes.

Mrs. Dean's three daughters, Ruth, 16, the eldest, Dorothea and Mimi are all followers in their mother's footsteps along the bridle path and are devoting their summer vacation to riding, with some swimming thrown in for variety.

* * * *

NOT TO BE OVERLOOKED in the convention of the District of Columbia Department of the American Legion is Jacob Jones Post, the largest women's post in the local organization, composed of those who served as yeomanettes during the war. Mrs. Belle K. Graves is commander and Miss Jane Cox, who preceded her in that office, is retiring vice commander of the D. C. Department of the Legion.

Jacob Jones Post has been awarded the Kate K. Briggs trophy, known as the community cup for service, in recognition of the welfare work it has carried on during the past year under the chairmanship of Mrs. Jessie Collins. It also won the cup awarded Thursday night to the best marching unit in the Legion parade.

The post now has 461 members and Miss Anne Frame is scheduled to succeed Mrs. Graves as commander without opposition at the annual election September 1.

* * * *

MRS. EDWARD HELMUTH, second vice president of the Chevy Chase Woman's Club, is spending a week at Rehoboth Beach. Mrs. Helmuth is also chairman of the civic section and, quite aside from her club activities, is chairman of Martin's Addition to Chevy Chase, Md.

* * * *

MISS SADE STYROM, well known pianist, has a hobby beside her music—cats.

Not only does she share with the rest of us a fondness for them, but she likes to read about them and cut out pictures of them. She began a collection of "catty" articdles (in the literal sense) and all her friends who knew about it sent her contributions. The result was that she had a thick and interesting cats and kittens scrapbook of her own within a year and enough material left over to make a second one for her sister, who loves them too.

NELLIE WALKER IRISH, treasurer of the National League of American Pen Women, has left for a visit with her brother, E. D. Walker, and his family at Champaign, Ill., where he is a member of the university faculty. She will also attend the homecoming at Williamsfield, Ill., where, for 25 years, she recorded the events of the community in her own newspaper.

Mrs. Irish will also attend the annual reunion of her college at Macomb, Ill., honoring the past president, Prof. I. F. Meyer.

MRS. BEN TEMPLE WEBSTER, of Chevy Chase, returned last Thursday from a motor trip to Michigan and the following day suffered a broken ankle in a fall.

Mrs. Webster is a member of the board of the Y. W. C. A. and of the Florence Crittenton Home and also is an active member of the Chevy Chase Women's Club.

Kamp Kahlert Plans Pageant

Gypsy Week-End Will Start Today; Barbecue Set for Tonight.

A gypsy week-end will start today at Kamp Kahlert, near Dudley, Md., and promises to be a busy one for both campers and counselors.

Tonight the campers will enjoy a pig barbecue, for which arrangements are being made by Miss Martha Phillips, dietitian from Atlanta, and Miss Mary Sue Williams.

The plan for the Gypsy Patteran this year is for each cabin to learn gypsy songs and as many as can to dress in costume. Such songs as "Oh, To Be a Gypsy," "Folow the Trail," and "Just Like a Gypsy" will be sung.

The big event of the week-end will be a water pageant tomorrow afternoon. This will be in charge of Miss Brownye Middleton, water-front counselor, and Leah Hicks, Indian and crafts counselor. Miss Hicks, who is of the Cherokee and Pauiti tribes, has been instructing the campers in Indian lore.

The pageant will be based on an old legend, in which an Indian chieftain decides to give his daughter and land to the bravest warrior in the camp, and a contest is scheduled to test who should win the maiden. The whole camp has been practicing choral speaking, special music and dances for the event. There will also be exhibits of canoeing and diving and various groups of swimmers, from beginers to the more advanced.

MRS. H. TRENDLEY DEAN likes riding so well she takes the reins of an "iron horse" which has speed as well as metal. She is shown at the controls of a Diesel engine on the National Limited of the B. & O. Engineer E. M. Heflin exchanged places with her before the train pulled out of the Union Station last night at 6:30, but she rode in the cab to see how the mountains looked, taking them head-on.

American Legion and Auxiliary Hold the Spotlight

PRESENTATION of a set of naval print plates to Miss Hazel Boyce, secretary for the D. C. Department of the American Legion, and her fiance, Fred Fraser, national head of the 40 and 8, by Gen. Frank T. Hines was a feature of last night's session of the department convention of the Legion Auxiliary at the Carlton. They are shown in the picture at the left, Mr. Fraser in uniform. Women of Jacob Jones Post, who served as yeomanettes during the war, are taking an active part in the American Legion convention at the Mayflower. Left to right, below, are Miss Jane Cox, second vice commander of the D. C. Department; Mrs. Belle K. The Great Web.

Give credit where the credit's due;
So may the world be just to you.
—Old Mother Nature.

"Do you think tha animals and birds do everything by instinct?" asked Sue

"No," replied the Old Naturalist, shaking his head "No, I don't believe that. Some people do, but I don't. To believe it would be to deny them intelligence, the ability to understand and reason. A great many things are done by instinct, some very wonderful things In fall and spring birds make long journeys, thousands of miles in some instances, with no one to guide them, yet do not get lost, often returning to the very places from which they started. Instinct, not intelligence, guides them. But when a friend's Dog deliberately tried to outwit us he was acting through intelligence, not instinct."

Between the two was a great web.

"What did he do?" Sammy wanted to know at once.

The Old Naturalist smiled, and into his eyes came a faraway look. "His name was Bruce," said he. "He was a pointer and, like all hunting dogs, was crazy to be afield. We boys often took Bruce with us, but there were times when we didn't want him. He was heartbroken when we left him behind. One day his master and I started for a walk and Bruce followed. He was sternly sent back and with his tail between his legs returned to the house and lay down on the porch. But when we were something like a mile from home I happened to look back and there was Bruce just sneaking up behind us, his tail between his legs and a beseeching look in his eyes. It was too far to send him home and he knew it.

"A friend had seen the whole performance and told us about it later. Bruce had remained on the porch until we turned the first corner. Then he had run to that corner and peeked around it, showing no more than his nose and eyes. There he watched until we turned the next corner, when he repeated the performance. He did it a third time and then decided it would be safe to join us. The next time his master went to walk I watched Bruce work the same trick. The old rascal deliberately kept out of sight until he was sure he wouldn't be sent back. That was intelligence."

"Is that a true story?" Sue wanted to know.

"Absolutely," the Old Naturalist assured her.

Then he was told how Striped Chipmunk had solved the problem of getting peanuts suspended beyond his reach from the ground and his opinion as to whether it had been done through instinct or intelligence was asked.

"I think it was intelligence, but Tommy says it could have been through instinct. I don't believe that," declared Sue.

Tommy explained how he had seen squirrels in trees reach down and pull up nuts from twigs below them and how he had seen Striped Chipmunk himself do much the same thing when gathering maple keys. "After all, pulling up those strings was much the same thing; it was the same idea," he concluded.

The Old Naturalist nodded. "That is true," said he. "One of the most difficult things is to draw the line between instinct and intelligence. Perhaps Striped Chipmunk used a little of both. Many wonderful things that look as if they must be the result of intelligent action are done wholly through instinct. Come with me and I will show you a splendid example."

He led the way to two trees standing some feet apart. Between the two was a great web, a splendid example of the work of a spider belonging to the group known as orb-weavers. It was like a dainty piece of silvery lace. Strong silken guy lines had ben stretched between the trees and on this framework had been woven the exquisite orb of the completed web. So perfectly was it woven, so securely anchored, that it seemed that only intelligence of a high order could have produced it.

"Oh, what a lovely thing!" exclaimed Sue.

"Isn't it," replied the Old Naturalist. "And," he added, "it is wholly the product of instinct. The builder was little more than a living machine. If I should damage it she couldn't repair it. She wouldn't know enough to. Instinct. Just instinct."

Moose Women Dress Dolls

The doll dressing contest of Columbia Chapter, Women of the Moose, terminated at the meeting last evening at Moose Hall. Miss Frances Andrews, a well known social worker of the District of Columbia Community Chest, and Mrs. Ralph Wilson were the judges

Among the dolls entered in the contest were a group of three, representing an officer of Columbia Chapter and her escorts; another representing the grand recorder of the Women of the Moose, Miss Katherine Smith, in official robes, and another, the chapter's "Mooseheart Baby," John Stephen Erickson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Erickson, graduates of Mooseheart. There were also entrants representing a Red Cross nurse, a dancing girl, a Colonial dame and "Aunt Jemima." A number of other dolls were entered, some with several entire outfits of dainty clothes.

The contest was sponsored by the homemaking committee of Columbia Chapter and the winning dolls will be sent to the National Women of the Moose Doll Dressing Contest to be held at Pittsburgh August 27, in connection with the election and installation of the new national officers. Mrs. Mae Sine, homemaking chairman, announced that the dolls would be sent for Christmas to the national home and school maintained by the Moose Fraternity for its orphaned children, at Moosseheart, Ill.

Mrs. Etta Wolf, senior regent of Arlington Chapter, and a group of the members from there were the guests of Columbia Chapter at the meeting last evening.

Woman's Party Program Ready For Convention

Meeting at Detroit to Hear Miss Laura Berriern, Capital Lawyer.

Miss Laura Berrien, of Washington, member of the National Woman's Party and recently elected president of the National Women Lawyers Association, will be a banquet speaker at the convention of the Woman's Party which opens in Detroit Friday, October 7. Miss Olive Hurlburt, chairman of the convention program, has been at Alva Belmont House, national headquarters here, for the last month, working out with other party leaders the conclave plans.

The banquet at which Miss Berrien will speak is to be Saturday night, October 8, with representatives from other fields which feel the need for equal rights, as special guests. Mrs. Besse Moton Garner, of the Michigan Labor and Industrial Commission, will be the speaker.

The same day for which this banquet is scheduled, there will be a reunion luncheon for suffrage prisoners. This occasion is one to which the early workers of the party look forward. It is a time for recalling the struggle for the vote—a fight too soon forgotten, they say, as women of the younger generation take for granted their voice in public affairs and fail to use it to full advantage.

Among the suffrage prisoners from Washington who will be present are Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, past president of the Women's City Club and a member of the council of the Woman's Party; Elise Hill and Mrs. Helena Hill Weed. Mrs. Florence Bayard Hilles, of Delaware, also will be among them.

Preceding the formal opening of the convention the evening of October 7, there will be a trip to Greenfield Village, with a visit to the Ford Museum and the Edison Institute, in the afternoon, followed by a reception at Dearborn, Ind.

Mrs. Stephen Pell, of New York City, national chairman, will preside at the opening business session

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

Washington, Aug. 13.

GILT OFF THE DOME: Some officials borrow books from the Congressional Library and keep them a year . . . A rumor that FDR will force them to learn to sail a boat is annoying Army colonels and generals . . . One Ed Eccles is often waked by midnight calls asking if he will accept reversed phone charges from New York to Marriner Eccles of Federal Reserve; he always says, "Hell, no!" . . . Wonder . . . poetic justice if Vera Bloom is still on friendly terms with Mussolini?

Mrs. Clark.

• • • •

FOREIGN RELATIONS: One Cabinet member is telling his friends that, except for the accident of a rather similar language, England is more foreign to Americans than any country in Europe . . .

Dr. Gallup's surveys show that for 53 per cent of Americans, England is the favorite foreign country; but only 35 per cent of the English like the United States best.

• • • •

It's a pity the La Follette quiz is ending . . . It was the best show in town, and in an air-cooled room, too, with smoking permitted . . . Young Senator Bob is quite the questioner, and when he ran dry there were young assistants at his elbow to prompt him in whispers with Jesuitical fervor . . .

I kept expecting the young aide to smile, and once or twice I thought he had. But I was mistaken; his face was merely twitching a little.

"—merely front porch bombs"

He didn't even smile when a Youngstown "back-to-worker," asked to describe some bombs he had mentioned, said they were little fellows, just big enough to blow off a front porch . . . Senator La Follette smiled here, and also when the witness said he had his deer rifle ready for the dash through the picket lines into Republic Steel . . . Just a hint of pioneer Americanism.

• • • •

An even better show is billed for this week, as the resonant Representative Dies, of Texas, begins to investigate alien propaganda and espionage . . . I wonder whether he and Senator La Follette compared dates so their bookings would not conflict . . . I was struck by the 100 per cent self-righteousness of the witnesses on both sides in the strike rehash.

• • • •

CAPITAL LANDMARK: Some of the tourists, believe it or not, still seek out the Admiral Dewey house; he's still the great hero for people in their fifties and sixties . . .

There's a little confusion, for there are two Dewey mansions. There's one on Rhode Island avenue near Connecticut avenue, the one the patriots gave him. He gave it to his son (amid cries of dismay) when he married John McLean's sister.

• • • •

Then he moved into the other, her fine house at Sixteenth and K, which now seems destined to become a boarding house. But the Dewey fans still gaze at it fondly. "Sic transit gloria mundi." I heard an old gent with a white beard say yesterday, as he ambled off to stare at the National Geographic and the Russian Embassy, nearby and across the street from each other.

"—week-end outside London"

Englanders think maybe Chamberlain will blunder through, according to the first wave of returned tourists . . . But even men on $2,000-$3,000 a year are buying or building shacks ("funk-holes") in the country away from London.

They time themselves by various routes week-ends, to see how long it would take to make it out with the family when the first German bomber is reported crossing the channel.

They think Tony Eden will become Prime Minister, maybe, before the shooting begins, to win us Americans over on their side.

• • • •

Nowadays any candidate who gets re-elected without a recount automatically becomes a candidate for the Presidency; but there's apt to be some real enthusiasm about Senator Bennett Clark of Missouri . . . His mellow, imperturbable wit, his free-and-easy camaraderie and his bluff, breezy manners have endeared him to quite a few . . .

• • • •

He is a nonideological Senator, of the inner circle to which only the "good troopers" in the Senate are admitted. His wife is an Iowa girl, the daughter of the Wilbur Marsh who was Democratic national chieftain in the days when Woodrow Wilson edged Clark's father, Champ, out of the Presidency. In any times but these Senator Clark would be deemed quite a progressive . . .

There'd be a smear of poetic justice about it if Senator Clark were to win the nomination without the support (which he won't have) of Franklin Roosevelt, who was a great Wilsonian in 1912.

Legion Asks Congress for Auditorium

Requests Building That Will Be Memorial to War Dead.

Resolve That Structure Should Be 'Dedicated to World Peace.'

Delegates to the District Department of the American Legion last night asked that Congress appropriate funds for the construction of an auditorium here that would also serve as a World War Memorial.

In other business concluded at the meeting, James T. Brady, of National Cathedral Post 10, and Edward R. Dixon, of Government Printing Office Post 33, were nominated to succeed Thomas Mason, jr., as commander of the District Department. Elections will be held tonight.

Dedicated to Peace.

In adopting the resolution for the auditorium, delegates pointed out that there is no building in the city adequate for large public gatherings or any monument to the men who fought in the World War. They asked that the auditorium be dedicated to the "principle of world peace."

At the same time, the convention authorized the appointment of a committee to investigate the possibility of obtaining headquarters for the District Legion Department, at present operating without any centralized offices. The committee, when named, will be instructed to ask for a public grant or loan to finance the project and will meet with the District Commissioners to request donation of District-owned land.

To remedy the employment situation among war veterans, the convention delegates voted to urge their national body to create an "industrial co-ordination unit" to negotiate contracts with employers. The employers would agree to hire a specified number of war veterans, in return for which the Legion would seek to promote good will toward their products.

The organization also urged that employers use the United States Employment Service.

Ask Bigger F. B. I.

One resolution urged a larger appropriation for the Federal Bureau of Investigation. Another asked that Federal statutes be passed which would require registration of all pistols and revolvers and would tax transfers of such weapons.

In another action, the delegates recommended that a "national patriotic revival" be held from June 8 to June 14, 1939. The revival would be known as "Flag Week." The report of the resolutions committee was presented by Gen. Amos Fries.

Nominated for first vice commander were William T. Slattery, commander of Treasury Post 35, and Gail T. Judd, commander of Labor Department Post 32. Julia Long, commander of Jane A. Delano Post 6, was the sole nominee for second vice commander.

Joseph L. Koehd, of Agriculture Post 36; Alex MacKinnon, of Potomac Post 40, and Col. West A. Hamilton, of James E. Walker Post 26, were nominated for third vice commander. Joseph J. Malloy, of Sergt. Jasper Post, was unanimously renominated as national executive committeeman. Paul J. McGahan, of National Press Club Post 20, was named as alternate.

Youth 'Clinic' Brings Health and Fun to 200 Children

Bill Kelley (right), leader of the center's "falcon club," holds Capt. Hawks, the club's mascot. Bill found the young hawk on Massachusetts avenue northwest several days ago. The bird's diet is steak.

Co-operative efforts of citizens, social agencies, and neighborhood churches through a youth 'clinic' has brought about a healthful and traffic-safe environment for the children in the area of Tenth and N streets northwest.

Scores of children spend happy summer days in the Temple Recreation Center and the playground nearby, instead of in the streets, because sponsors of the projects acted quickly to provide the play facilities.

Some 200 youngsters participate in the daily program, learning to sew and cook, frolicking in the street "shower hour," and building model planes. And pride of the gang is "Capt. Hawks," pet falcon of 15-year-old Billy Kelley. It eats steaks and holds the important post of mascot in the "Falcon Club." Dozens of boys formerly gathered on street corners now make the center and playground their headquarters.

Just before schools recessed for the summer, Central Neighborhood Council and the Council of Social Agencies, realizing the need for summer play facilities, conferred with the Rev. Rudolph Gregory, of the Baptist Temple, founder of the "Happy Hour" movement.

The Rev. Mr. Gregory offered the church building as a center. Through efforts of the Rev. John L. Mixon, social welfare chairman of the Washington Federation of Churches, the Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church offered to act as sponsor, pledging supervisors' salaries. Capt. Emory I. Ireland was named chairman of the church committee.

B. E. Phillips, of George Washington U, physical education department, was appointed director, with Miss Martha Dudley as associate. Volunteer help has been an importan factor in the success of the undertaking. Mrs. Phillips teaches a primary group. Council of social Agencies has provided clerical aid.

Once the center was under way, Hugh Reilly, a nearby neighbor, offered his 200 by 300 feet lot for a playground. WPA workers cleared and graded the space. The Playground Department contributed equipment and play materials.

On Wednesday nights a special community program is held, with both children and parents enjoying movies, exhibitions, singing and refreshments. The children have been taken on trips to the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the Tech pool and District parks.

Summer activities of the center end September 10, but the "happy hour" on Friday evening will be continued the year around.

Horse Drinking Fountains in a Motor Age Seem All Wet to Men Who Repair Them

Exist Only to Be Broken Nowadays, Asserts Water Division.

Washington has 108 watering troughs—which the Water Division sometimes feels is 108 too many.

The Water Division is always having trouble with the troughs, which are referred to in official circles as "horse fountains." In accordance with a long-established tradition the fountains, although the property of the Humane Society, are installed, maintained and repaired by the valve section of the division.

And a horse fountain takes quite a beating in this motorized age. One trough at Dupont Circle, for instance, is knocked down every two or three months by an automobile, an official of the valve section declared yesterday. He believes every car which frequents the circle has run into that trough at one time or another.

Paving Problems, Too.

New street car tracks and widened highways also mean the end of many a trough. Tracks necessitated the removal of the fountain at Lamont and Seventeenth streets northwest. During the process of paving New Hampshire avenue several years ago, road workers broke the drain of another fountain. Stubbornly refusing to wait for the Water Division to repair the damage, they went right along paving the road. The fountain had been out of commission for a year before the Water Division had the heart to tell the Humane Society of the loss.

The society's records show that their earliest fountains were installed about 1884. One year as many as 145 were in use. Most of the troughs were donated by horse lovers in memory of relatives or friends.

The fountain at Thirteenth and New York avenue is the pet one of the Humane Society, according to the Water Division people. Cars parked in front of it all the time would prevent a horse from getting to it even if a horse should come along. But the society turns a deaf ear to polite suggestions from the Water Division that the fountain has outlived its usefulness.

And They're Costly.

Many years of uprooting damaged troughs—they are of thin cast iron which shatters easily—and installing others from their reserve stock have wearied the division's workers. Besides, they point out, it costs $200 or $300 to install a new fountain.

"We don't like to spend money on something we believe is becoming obsolete," one man said yesterday. "The number of horses is decreasing rapidly, although many birds and dogs still use the fountains."

A void exists around this watering trough on Thirteenth street between E street and Pennsylvania avenue. It is one of 108 such relics in the Capital.

The most expensive of the troughs is one at Kalmia street and Georgia avenue northwest. Several years ago a pedestrian asserted he had been injured severely when ground allegedly softened by a leak from the trough gave way beneath him. He sued for $50,000 damages and finally was awarded about $4,000.

As a precaution against leaks, the division's fire hydrant inspectors examine the troughs regularly.

End Seems Near.

According to an estimate made recently by the Water Survey, 5 gallons of water pass through each hydrant a minute. About 5,500 gallons a day go through each one. One year the fountains used 241,400,000 gallons of the District's water supply.

A note of glee crept into one inspector's voice yesterday as he announced that the reserve of horse fountains is exhausted, an indication that those now in use cannot be replaced as they are damaged and that the total number will begin diminishing soon—unless the Humane Society is given some more.

Bureau Asks $1,758,099 to Collect Trash

1940 Budget Estimate Figure 25% Higher Than This Year.

The District Refuse Department yesterday asked $1,758,099, a 25 per cent increase over the present appropriation, in its 1940 budget estimates, in order to keep the city "in a state of cleanliness approaching a proper standard for the Capital.

The additional funds provide a 40-hour week, on a weekly basis, for the employes, now work 33 to 36 hours a week on a per diem basis. Four truck drivers and 71 laborers will be added to the street cleaning division.

The report of Director William Xanten also informed the Commissioners that the refuse department was unprepared to handle removal of snow with president equipment, and asked $10,000 for necessary materials.

Library Asks $1,336,751.

At the same time, estimates of the Board of Library Trustees requested an allotment of $1,336,751 for 1940, an increase of $743,000. The figures include $500,000 to begin construction of the new central library at Pennsylvania avenue and John Marshall place northwest. The project already has been authorized by Congress. The present appropriation includes $60,000 for drafting plans for the building.

In his plea for 75 extra men in the street cleaning division, Director Xanten said:

"The addition to the force is a badly needed one as it is becoming more and more difficult to keep the streets comparatively free from an accumulation of litter, to say nothing of maintaining them in a state of cleanliness." Xanten also requested that Congress change the language of the appropriation bill so that free refuse service may be supplied to all four-family apartments. Presently, some 450 such apartments for which the landlord furnishes the heat, do not get free service.

The refuse department estimates ask $622,833 for salaries of the street cleaning force, an increase of $119,103 over the present personnel fund.

Despite an increase of 100 per cent in the cost of labor, and a rise of 200 per cent in the mileage of paved streets and aleys to be covered, the present street cleaning appropriation of $403,730 is the same as that for 1920.

For the collection and disposal of refuse, the department has requested $996,000, or $133,500 more than called for in the 1939 budget.

6 Va. Counties Bar Beer, Wine Sale on Sunday

ABC Board Also Notes 7% Decline in July Liquor Sales.

Richmond, Va., Aug. 12 (AP).—Six counties and four towns have certified to the State Liquor Control Board that they have adopted local ordinances banning Sunday wine and beer sales within their jurisdictions under authority of an act of the 1938 General Assembly.

The beverage control board also reported today that the decline in State liquor store sales continued through July. Sales by 88 State liquor stores totaled $1,311(505.20 last month, as compared with $1,391,333.55 by 77 stores in July, 1937. This decline of about 7 per cent, a board spokesman said, is about the same loss registered every month since February with the exception of June. The decline was attributed to general adverse economic conditions.

Governing bodies that have certified such action to the State board since the act became effective June 21 are Buckingham, Amelia, Mathews, Accomac, Highland and Craig Counties and the towns of Scottsville, Louisa, Newcastle and Saltville.

All the governing bodies certifying action to the State board so far have banned wine and beer sales between the hours of midnight Saturday and 6 o'clock Monday morning, the maximum limits under which they may order the ban.

Nats Pound Bosox Hurlers, Win, 13-1; Ferrell Fired

The Washington Post Sports

14 WASHINGTON: SATURDAY, AUGUST 13, 1938 X*

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

And Now Ferrell.

Paul Dean, Schoolboy Rowe, Lefty Grove . . . and now Wes Ferrell. Nineteen Thirty-eight will be remembered as the season when great pitchers passed out of the majors in a startling procession of famous names. But the strangest exit is that of Farrell's.

POVICH.

The others passed out of the big leagues naturally enough. Daffy Dean, plagued with a sore arm, never could recapture his speed and found a haven in Dallas. Schoolboy Rowe's story was the same. Bursitis, the modern name for the old-fashioned sore arm, struck him down, too. He went back to Beaumont. This week Lefty Grove, attempting to pitch with an arm that suddenly became lifeless, walked out of the box after two innings, and said: "Boys, I'm through. She's dead as a board."

But Ferrell, when released yesterday, had won 13 games this season. Only Red Ruffing and Lefty Grove, among all the American League pitchers, had won more games. Ferrell was the leading pitcher on the Washington club. His arm gave him no pain. Only last week he had held the St. Louis Browns to six hits and one earned run. Yet he was waived out by the 16 major league clubs.

Feat Is Amazing.

Ferrell was pitching with his head during the past five years. He did not have the same stabbing pain in his arm that plagued Dean and Rowe and Gomez. He simply lost his fast ball from lack of leverage owing to muscles that had contracted in his shoulder. In many ways, Ferrell's feat of staying in the big leagues and showing a winning percentage for the past five years is no less than amazing.

The batter always knew that Ferrell was going to pitch a slow curve. Yet Wesley never permitted the hitter to dig in at the plate and swing. In lieu of his speed, he perfected deception. Every movement of his hands and body preliminary to his pitch was calculated to throw the batter off stride. He was literally pitching with his brain and to the keen student of pitching he was something to marvel at.

Of Ferrell it was said that he that he won, nevertheless, is to his good fortune to have his team hitting behind him, and that he won his games by inflated scores. But that he won, nevertheless, is to his everlasting credit. Ty Cobb used to say, "To hell with these pitchers who always lose those low-scoring close games. Give me those guys who can win and I don't care what the score is."

No stranger fellow than Ferrell ever strolled down the baseball pike. He was a striking contrast to his brother Rick, the perfect antithesis of the mild-mannered little catcher who was his batterymate. The two Ferrells were as far apart as the poles in temperament. Quiet, subdued Rick was no kin in manner and temperament to the vibrant, temperamental Wesley.

Ferrell Is Smart.

Of other temperamental characters it might be said that they were 98 per cent temper and 2 per cent mental. But Ferrell is an erudite young man, conversant with the topis of the day, and of his cunning on the ball field there was never any doubt. His outbursts on the field took the form of self-chastisement. Never did he blame an errant or lax colleague for his defeat.

Ferrell had no greater admirer of his pitching talent than Bucky Harris. "I'm not convinced that guy is through," said Harris in 1934, after Ferrell refused to report to the Cleveland Indians who had virtually halved his salary on the suspicion that Wesley's sore arm spelled his finish.

In 1933, Ferrell had encountered his worst season in the majors, winning only 11 games against 12 defeats. But Harris, who was appointed manager of the Red Sox in 1934, still had faith in the big fellow's ability to win despite the loss of his speed. He bought him cheaply from the Cleveland club, and Ferrell justified Harris' faith by winning 14 games for the Red Sox and losing only five, despite his late start that season.

Harris Backed Deal.

It was Harris who prevailed on Clark Griffith to make the Newsom - Chapman trade which brought Ferrell to the Nats last summer, and Harris thrilled at the exhibition by Ferrell in his first game with the Nats, when he held Chicago to five hits and shut them out.

Yesterday, Harris had only praise for Ferrell. "He has slipped too much to be of any use to us, but I'll always remember what a great pitcher he was. They can talk of their Fellers and their Vander Meers, and the rest of the new sensations, but I never did see a young pitcher who was as good as Ferrell when he broke in.

"Out there in Cleveland in his early years, he had everything. He had a fast ball that would blow you down. And his curve was pretty, too. He wasn't worried by control, like most of these young phenoms you now see. He was a perfect pitcher from the time he came into the league. He knew how to pitch from the first day he ever went to the box for Cleveland."

Deal Turns Sour.

Ferrell's release yesterday was another sorry chapter in the big midsummer deal of 1937, when the Nats traded Ben Chapman and Buck Newsom to the Red Sox in exchange for the Ferrell freres and Melo Almada. Now, a year

Cubs Batter Buc Hurlers To Win, 9-3

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, Aug. 12.—Chicago's challenging Cubs made a personal probe into the Pittsburgh pennant proceedings today and found that two of the Pirates' best pitchers could be touched for 16 hits—sufficient to win, 9 to 3.

After Pittsburgh jumped into a short-lived one-run lead in the third, the Cubs began getting to Jim Tobin, who now has won ten and lost six, and finally forced him to the showers in the seventh after Stan Hack poled a home run into the rightfield stands with one on.

Mace "Fireman" Brown, only other Pirate pitcher who has won ten or more games, failed to put out the conflagration and Chicago added three more runs in the ninth.

Carl Reynolds put the Cubs in front for the first time in the sixth by tripling with two on after a double and a single had tied the count at 1 to 1 in the fifth. Reynolds himself scored on Manager Gabby Hartnett's second double, but Tobin got the side out and faced three men in the seventh.

Giants Beat Phils; Gumbert Gives 3 Hits.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Aug. 12.—The New York Giants today made their first appearance at Shibe Park since the World Series of 1913, and nipped the Phillies, 1 to 0, behind the three-hit hurling of Harry Gumbert.

By his performance, Gumbert became the first Giant hurler to go the route in two weeks, and the first to pitch a shutout since July 4.

Al Hollingsworth went the distance for the Phile and gave up only six hits. The only run came in the sixth, when Dick Bartell beat out a bunt, went to third on Jojo Moore's single and scored on Hank Danning's fly.

Since the league-leading Pittsburgh Pirates lost to Chicago, the win boosted the Giants to within 5½ games of the pace.

Travis and Foxx Tied for Lead.

The American League's two leading batters went hitless yesterday as Washington defeated Boston, and their averages slumped accordingly. Cecil Travis, Washington's shortstop whose .349 represented a scant one point lead over Jimmy Foxx, Red Sox first-baseman, failed to hit in three official times at bat, and his figures dropped to .346. Foxx, paradoxically, dropped into a tie for the leadership as his mark slumped to the same figure. He failed to hit in two times at bat.

Bees Defeat Dodgers, 2-1

Take Fifth Place Behind Turner's Pitching.

Boston, Aug. 12 (AP).—The Bees regained fifth place in the National League standings today with a 2-to-1 victory over the Brooklyn Dodgers.

Jim Turner gave up seven hits, fanned four and did not walk a man in chalking up his tenth win of the year. The only run scored off him was Dolph Camilli's homer in the second.

Dodgers Purchase Southpaw Rogers

Brooklyn, Aug. 12 (AP).—The Dodgers today purchased southpaw pitcher Lee Rogers from the Boston Red Sox and optioned John Chambers, a right-hander, to Minneapolis of the American Association.

Rogers, who is 24, played with Little Rock last year, and lives in Holt, Ala., has appeared in 13 games for the Red Sox this season, and shows a record of one victory and one defeat.

Chambers is a product of the St. Louis Cardinals farm system, and hurled for Columbus last season.

Parker Loses To Joe Hunt

Riggs and Allison Also Win in Tourney.

By the Associated Press.

Rye, N. Y., Aug. 12.—Featured by the brilliant and unexpected victory of Joe Hunt, of Los Angeles, over Frank A. Parker, of Beverly Hills, Calif., the men's singles of the Eastern grass courts tennis championships moved into the semifinals today and the women's singles reached the final.

Hunt, who eliminated Parker, seeded second, 6—4, 6—4, was joined in the round of four by Bobby Riggs, who whipped Ronald Lubin; Wilmer Allison, who defeated Gene Mako, and Jack Kramer, 17-year-old Montebello, Calif., player who won when Bitsy Grant, still showing the effects of his collapse the day previously, defaulted.

In the women's singles, Alice Marble met unexpected opposition from her doubles partner, Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan, but won, 10—8, 8—6. While Dorothy Bundy eliminated Mme. Sylvia Henrotin, of France, 6—4, 5—7, 6—0.

Hunt will meet Allison, 34-year-old former national champion, in one semifinal tomorrow, while Riggs will play Kramer in the other.

Don Budge and Mako, the Wimbledon doubles champions, had difficulty in attaining the semifinals of the men's doubles, but did so by beating down the surprise team of Verne Hughes and Mort Ballagh, 3—6, 7—5, 6—3. Budge was playing wretchedly, but Mako held the team together with his fine play. The Ballagh-Hughes duo upset Frank Shields and Frank Kovacs yesterday.

The women's doubles finalists were established when the Marble-Fabyan team routed Mme. Henrotin and Mrs. Dorothy Andrus in love sets and Kay Stammers and Margot Lumb whipped Miss Bundy and Dorothy Workman, 6—2, 6—1.

Dodgers Will Pay $15,000, 2 Players For Greek Catcher

Brooklyn, N. Y., Aug. 12 (AP).—The Brooklyn Dodgers will pay the equivalent of $30,000 for their new backstop, Charley George, acquired from the New Orleans Club of the Southern Association.

Two players, to be named later, and about $15,000 in cash were reported involved in the deal, announced today.

George, a full-blooded Greek, is a native of Georgia and former all-around athlete at Oglethorpe University. He had a previous major leage trial with the Cleveland Indians, for whom he was behind the bat when Bob Feller, on September 13, 1936, fanned 17 Athletics to equal the major league strikeout record.

George, who has been hitting over .300, will report to the Dodgers in early September, at the close of the Southern Association season.

2,000 See Baugh Exhibition; Wrenn Wins Passing Contest

16-Year-Old Georgetown Playground Champion Takes Distance Throw With Heave of 53 Yds. 1 Ft.

By the Associated Press.

Slingin' Sammy Baugh set a new style in football tactics yesterday when he wired his passes for sound and gave a thrilling exhibition of his forward passing skill to more than 2,000 football fans on the Ellipse.

Taking a microphone into the backfield with him, Slingin' Sammy announced his intentions on each passing attempt through the loud-speaking system and then gave a dazzling demonstration of his skill.

To Wayne Millner and Carlie Malone, star ends of the Redskin team, Baugh threw long passes, short passes, flat, bullet heaves and flashy over-the-line tosses, telling how each pass was designed to outwit the defense.

In the contest for accuracy, in which the 10 leaders of the distance throw competed, Hal Brown, of the Hearst Playground, took down first honors. Throwing from a distance of 45 feet, young Brown sent one of his two heaves directly through a suspended automobile tire and on his second heave hit the rim.

Congratulating Brown on his triumph, Baugh presented him with a shiny new official pro league football. Second in the accuracy contest was Ralph Mickeljohn, of Takoma Playground, who sent one of his two throws through the tire.

Baugh, who on Monday will join the sports staff of The Post as a football commentator, attempted without success to throw a football into an upright barrel from 50 yards, but drew down the cheers of the gathering when he succeeded in hitting the rim.

Throw for distance—Ray Wrenn (Georgetown), 53 yards 1 foot; Ed Pohutsky (Garfield), 52 yards 1 foot; Jack Gillmore (Burroughs), 52 yards 1 foot; Hal Brown (Hearst), 50 yards 2 feet; George McGowan (National Training), 49 yards 1 foot; Ralph Meickiejohn (Takoma), 48 yards; Harry Ellsworth (Montrose), 47 yards 6 inches; Paul Di Meglio (Edgemoor), 46 yards 1 foot; Victor Berman (Judiciary), 45 yards; Frank Brown (Palisades), 44 yards.

Throw for accuracy—Hal Brown, four points; Ralph Meickiejohn, three points; George McGowan, two points; Paul Di Meglio and Ray Wrenn, one point. Failed to score—Ed Pohutsky, Jack Gillmore, Harry Ellsworth, Victor Berman and Frank Bowman.

Case, Chapman to Run Here on Labor Day

Arrangements were completed yesterday for a $500 purse race between George Case, of the Nats, and Ben Chapman, of the Red Sox, to decide "baseball's fastest man." The 100-yard race will be run off between games of a Labor Day double-header here. The winner is to receive $300, the loser $200.

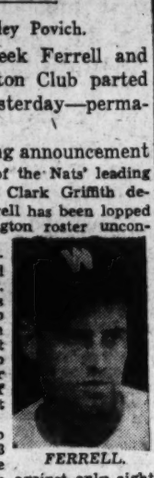
Myer Hits Home Run With Bases Loaded

'Rebuilding,' Says Griff as Veteran Hurler Is Released.

By Shirley Povich.

Wesley Cheek Ferrell and the Washington Club parted company yesterday—permanently.

In a startling announcement of the release of the Nats' leading pitcher, Owner Clark Griffith declared that Ferrell has been lopped off the Washington roster unconditionally.



FERRELL.

"We are rebuilding," said Griffith simply. "Ferrell does not figure to help us. I wish him luck, but we are going to rebuild our pitching staff along different lines."

Ferrell, who had won 13 games for the Nats this season against only eight defeats and long has been known as a temperamental character, expressed amazement at his release but took it calmly.

"This is a new one—releasing a pitcher who has won more games than anybody else on the club," said Ferrell, "but I'm not worried. I'll get a job, not this season, perhaps. I think I'll lay off for the rest of the year. But I'll be in the majors next season. You can bet on that."

Temperament Hurts.

Griffith refused to elaborate on the reasons underlying the release of his No. 1 pitcher except to say that Ferrell did not pitch good ball for the Nats despite his 13 victories. But it has long been known that the Nats' owner has been no little piqued by the tall pitcher's temperamental outbursts. At one point, in the first month of the season, Griffith was so incensed against Ferrell that he threatened to call him off a road trip and suspend him.

Only two American League pitchers—Charley Ruffing and Lefty Grove—have won more games than Ferrell ths season. But Ferrell was able to complete only 9 of the 22 contests he started for the Nats. On their recent trip, he won only one game and failed to go the route in that contest.

Griffith declared that he had tried to line up a job for Ferrell with another major league club before giving him his outright release. "But all clubs in both big leagues waived their claim to him," said the Nats' owner, "and I was unable to make any sort of a deal. As late as yesterday I was in communication with the Chicago Cubs and Pittsburgh Pirates on Ferrell's behalf, but they were uninterested."

Salary Too High.

Ferrell's salary, reported to be $14,000, is believed to be a factor in the failure of other big league clubs to claim him. It also is believed to have had a bearing on his release by the Nats.

Until 1932 when he suffered a sore arm, Ferrell was known as a fastball pitcher. He broke in sensationally with the Cleveland Indians in 1928, winning 21 games in his first season. He was a 20-game winner in six of his 10 years in the big leagues and staged a sensational comeback in 1934 despite his sore arm.

Signed for the Red Sox by Manager Bucky Harris after refusing to report to Cleveland in a salary dispute, Ferrell blossomed as one of the outstanding curve ball pitchers in the league. Despite his lack of speed, he was a consistent winner with emphasis on control and pitching smartness.

Traded to the Nats last summer along with his brother Rick and Mel Almada, Ferrell was an immediate success with Washington, but this year he has been hit hard, scoring many lucky victories. In the opening game against the Athletics, he won despite the fact he allowed 16 hits.

No stranger individual than Ferrell has ever been a part of the modern baseball scene. His displays of temper, easily provoked, have drawn him fines and suspensions with both Cleveland and Boston, and his habit of walking out of the box before being ordered out has been a thorn in the side of his managers.

On occasions he has flung bats and ripped gloves to shreds. But as a rule, managers have been tolerant with him in deference to his pitching skill and his philosophy of blaming no one but himself for games that he lost, whether by his own pitching or teammates' errors.

Leonard Allows Red Sox Seven Hits, but Lets Vosmik Score.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

With "Dutch" Leonard's tantalizing slow curve describing big question marks while his mates were powdering the offerings of four Boston hurlers for 16 lusty hits, the Nats celebrated their latest home-coming yesterday by swamping the Red Sox, 13-1, in a ladies' day exhibition of long-range batting.

They were the sockless Sox when Mr. Leonard began to unwind his mile-a-century fast 'un. Seven measly hits were all Papa Cronin's boys coaxed out of the chubby Dutchman, and two of these came in the ninth when the Sox scored a run and saved themselves from the disgrace of a shutout.

As a matter of fact not a man reached second until the seventh when Ben Chapman poked a double down the left-field line. But he was left standing there like a stray case of smallpox when Tabor rolled to Myer for the third out. Leonard, moreover, walked nary a man and would have had a shutout but for a temporary lapse when he pitched one into the backstop in the ninth, permitting Nonnenkamp to score.

Four Pitchers Fail.

The Nats, meanwhile, had dragged up their heavy fowling pieces and were having great sport with the visiting chuckers. Wilson started for Boston and was followed by Midkiff, Rogers and McKain—none of whom proved very effective. It was Midkiff who suffered the geatest damage—although the blame was not entirely his.

The tall, gangling countryman came up to the majors by way of Sarasota, Little Rock and Minneapolis. He went to the showers in the fifth inning by way of Leonard and Buddy Myer, although blame for his sudden departure was not wholly his. An error by Third Baseman Tabor hastened his downfall. It was Myer who put the finishing touches to a disastrous appearance for Midkiff by smacking a home run over the rightfield wall with the bases fully populated. The blow featured a seven-run rally.

Bonura Gets Homer.

But even before Buddy's prodigious drive, Zeke Bonura had brought the fair ladies screaming to their collective feet with a beeline swat that ended in a cluster o fstraw hats about five rows up in the leftfield bleachers. Buddy Lewis was on base at the time, having bounced a double off the rightfield wall to open the inning. A foot higher and this, too, would have gone for the circuit, other in the seventh only served to fatten the victors' batting averages and prolong the affair, for the Sox at that stage of the proceedings were ready to concede defeat.

The Nats gave an inkling of the assault to come as early as the first inning when Myer led off with a single and Simmons rammed a double into rightfield. But for a fast double play in between on Lewis' drive to Cronin they would have had a run. They got their run and another hit in the second with the aid of Boston's clumsy fielding.

Fielders Collide.

Travis led off with a walk. West and Wright went out in order, but Angelo Giuliani, who replaced Rick Ferrell behind the bat, sent a balloon pop fly soaring into short rightfield. Chapman raced in for it and Bobby Doerr galloped out from second, both claiming possession. They collided and the ball dropped safely for a double while Travis legged it home from first.

Buddy Lewis' single and stolen base, followed by an infield out and Bonura's first hit of the afternoon, gave the Nats their second run in the third inning. They added another in the fourth on a queerly mixed batch of baseball, which ended with Leonard tapping an easy roller to Tabor, after West and Giuliani had singled, West scoring when DeSautels dropped Tabor's throw. Leonard was thrown out trying to sneak down to second during the resulting confusion.

If you must have the gory details of the fifth, Lewis opened with

Laffoon Fires 139 to Lead $10,000 Cleveland Open

In This Corner

By Jack Cuddy.
By the United Press.

Richards Vidmer, The Post columnist, is on vacation. While he is away, Jack Cuddy's "In This Corner" will occupy the spot usually taken by "Down In Front."

'Gunner' Gunnar.

New York, Aug. 12.—In these days when good heavyweights are nearly as rare as quintuplets, it seems that Manhattan should have given a Corrigan ticker-tape reception to the man most likely to beat Joe Louis, when he returned to our shores.

CUDDY.

But the only guy who went down on the cutter to greet the great Gunnar Barlund off Quarantine was hefty Paul Damski. Herr Damski happens to be the Gunnar's manager.

Barlund, a fair-skinned 6-footer, with crisp, taffy-colored hair, returned from his native Finland on Thursday, ready to launch his championship campaign. And if this white hope needed an inspiration, he had said inspiration right on his arm—his pretty blonde bride, the former Eva Melin, of Kristinenhamn, Sweden.

The Gunnar, who has been vacationing in Finland for the past three months, is the fastest and finest boy puncher among big men in the ring today. Remember him? He's the chap who knocked out big Buddy Baer in March. And just before that he "mollered" the Argentine menace, Alberto Lovell. Only recently down in South America Lovell was good enough to whale the daylights out of Arturo Godoy, who beat "Two-ton" Tony Galento twice last year. Remember Galento? He's the guy whom the National Boxing Association named the No. 1 heavyweight challenger. All of which should make Barlund the No. 1 something-or-other.

Barlund scarcely had regained his land legs when Promoter Mike Jacobs practically matched him up for a 15-round bout at Madison Square Garden with England's battle-scarred Tommy Farr in October or November. Remember Farr? He lasted the full 15 rounds with Louis last August, although later outpointed by Maxie Baer and Jim Braddock.

Louis Stays Idle.

Champion Louis will not fight again this year. He has agreed instead to make four title defenses in 1939. So we can concentrate now on the development of a worthwhile challenger in "Uncle" Mike's proposed heavyweight tournament.

Barlund welcomes this tournament. He probably is the only heavyweight extant who does not crave an immediate meeting with "Brown Bomber" Louis, because of the quick dough involved. Barlund and Manager Damski say: "We wouldn't take Louis now. We want him in a big outdoor shot next June. Meanwhile, we will use Farr, Maxie Baer and Galento as stepping stones toward such a million-dollar gate."

After ten years of fighting—seven in the amateurs and three as a professional—the 25-year-old Gunnar is just approaching the peak of his career. He scales 210 pounds now, 9 more than his fighting weight, and he steps around like a lightweight.

To prepare for Tommy Farr, he will go to Lake George, N. Y., next week and rough it for nearly a month, leaving his bride in New York. Then he will begin serious training at Pompton Lakes, N. J.

100,000 Will See Germans Vs. Yanks.

Berlin, Aug. 12 (U.P.).—A 40-man track and field team faces Germany tomorrow and Sunday in a 20-event meet that will be the greatest since the Olympic Games of 1936.

The Americans, who came to Berlin in three groups after touring England and Sweden, tonight were favored to win—but not by such outstanding margins as they have cleaned up in other European trials.

The meet will be held in Olympic Stadium and a crowd of 100,000 spectators is certain. Germany, with three Olympic champions in its lineup, figures to win six events, the United States eight. The other six events appeared to be tossups.

Paces Field By 2 Shots With Fine 69

Burke and Pena Tied at 141 for Second Spot; Foulis Has 67.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, Aug. 12.—Ky Laffoon, the Chicago shotmaker with a strain of Cherokee Indian, took to the wooded hills and meandering creeks of the Oakwood course and cantered in easily today—two under par and two strokes ahead of the pack in the $10,000 Cleveland Open golf tournament.

Laffoon went along quietly on the first nine and took a 5 on the par 4 tenth, and then began clubbing par and wound up with a 69 for a two-day total of 70-69—139.

Billy Burke, of Cleveland, and Tony Penna, of Dayton, Ohio, were closest to his heels, both with 70-71—141.

Jim Foulis, of Hinsdale, Ill., whose grandfather, Jim, was the U. S. Open champion in 1896, turned in the best score of the day, a 67, which tied the course record held by Denny Shute. Foulis collected three birdies and an eagle three.

Snead Shoots 143.

Sam Snead, who wound up today with a 72 and a total of 143, made the funniest shot of the day. Coming into the eighteenth, Snead hit his second shot toward the clubhouse. An obliging gentleman opened the locker room door at the moment and Snead's ball sailed inside. It cost a stroke and Snead was still grumbling when he missed a putt for a six.

Laffoon, who shot six sub-70 rounds in the Western Open of 1934 at Peoria, Ill., and lost, will face plenty of competition tomorrow, when the field will be narrowed down to those with 153 totals or better and the pace accelerated.

Three strokes behind him are Harry Cooper—who beat him after a 36-hole playoff in that 1934 Western Open—E. J. Harrison, of Chicago, and Bill Kaiser, of Louisville, Ky.

Byron Nelson, of Reading, Pa., who had one of the three 69s Thursday, found the going tougher today and wound up with a 74 for 143, still very much in the running. A member of the Ryder Cup team, Nelson had trouble with his putting.

Guldahl Has 144.

Another stroke back were Toby Lyons, Cambridge Springs, Pa., amateur; F. F. Ferre, of High Point, N. C.; Henry Picard, Hershey, Pa.; Phil Perkins, Cleveland; Willie Goggin, San Bruno, Calif.; Leo Willcox, Marion, Ohio; Ray Mangrum, Oakmont, Pa.; Jim Foulis and Ralph Guldahl, the National Open champion, who shot another 72 today to add to the one he collected yesterday.

Tommy Wright, the 22-year-old pro of a "little, 40-member" golf club in Stearns, Ky., propelled himself into the running today when his putter became warm the way he likes it by shooting a 69 for a two-day total of 145. Tied with him was Mortie Dutra, the Detroit veteran.

The remainder of the field of 92, which will take the field tomorrow, was closely bunched between 145 and 153.

Ripley Signs With Hoyas

Former Basketball Star Will Coach Cagers.

Elmer H. Ripley, one of basketball's immortals, last night signed a two-year contract as basketball coach at Georgetown University, it was announced by Gabriel Murphy, graduate manager of athletics. Terms of the contract were not divulged.

Ripley succeeds Fred Mesmer, who resigned this summer after a seven-year reign as Hilltop coach, to devote full time to his law practice. Mesmer has been a member of the District of Columbia bar for the last six years. The athletic board accepted his resignation with regret.

For Ripley, the signing marks his return to the scene of his greatest triumphs. As Georgetown coach in 1927 and 1928 he led Hoya teams to some of their most coveted victories, climaxed by a record of 21 wins in 22 games in 1928.

Ripley resigned his position at Georgetown at the close of the '28 season to accept a similar position at Yale. There he remained for six years and produced consistently fine teams.

For the last few years Ripley has been a "good-will ambassador" for Spalding's, and in this capacity traveled over the country lecturing to high school and college audiences in an effort to whip up greater interest in the court sport.

Ripley will be remembered by old-time followers of basketball as a member and star of the original New York Celtics, which is generally recognized as the sport's outstanding team.

Man of the Month

(WJSV-Wheaties Baseball Commentator.)

(Each day, Arch McDonald distributes 10 points among the Nats whose play was most helpful to the Washington Club. At the end of each month The Washington Post will award to the leading player a gift in token of the honor of being The Post-Wheaties "Man of the Month.")

Buddy Myer and Zeke Bonura continued their hot pace for the lead in the Man of the Month contest yesterday but, on the basis of their efforts in the 13-1 victory over the Red Sox, Myer moves to the front by a one-point margin. Yesterday's ten points were distributed as follows:

To Dutch Leonard, four points, because he pitched a masterful game in holding the Red Sox to seven hits and shutting them out until the ninth.

To Myer, three points, because his home run over the wall with the bases full in the fifth inning clinched the game.

To Bonura, two points, because his home run into the leftfield seats with a man on base in the fifth boosted the Nats' lead from 3-0 to 5-0.

To Angelo Giuliani, one point, because he contributed three hits to the Nats' attack and drove in a run.

Yankees, A's Break Even In Twin Bill

Macks Win Opener, 5-4, on Johnson's Homer But Lose 2d, 16-3.

New York, Aug. 12.—The Yankees and Philadelphia Athletics divided a double-header today, during which ten home runs were hit for the entertainment of 25,864 paying customers and 8,719 "Ladies Day" guests.

Bob Johnson's twenty-fourth homer of the year in the ninth inning of the opener gave the A's a 5-to-4 decision and handed Red Ruffing his fourth pitching loss of the season, against 15 victories. In the nightcap, the Yanks clubbed three pitchers for 16 hits and a 16-to-3 decision, with George Selkirk whacking two homers and driving in eight runs.

Line-Drive Lynn Nelson and Ruffing hooked up in a mound duel in the first game, disturbed only by the occasional round-trip wallops from both sides. Joe DiMaggio clouted his twenty-second in the first inning to send the Yanks out in front, and Selkirk and Bill Dickey added one apiece in the sixth.

Frankie Hayes brought the A's from behind with a four-bagger in the fourth and Lou Finney tied it up in the seventh with another, setting the stage for Johnson's game-wrecker. Lefty Edgar Smith, who relieved Nelson in the eighth, took the decision over Ruffing.

In the nightcap, after Lou Gehrig belted his nineteenth of the year in the second. Selkirk hit his second homer of the afternoon and his first of the game in the fourth with two on, and clouted the homer in the seventh, after three walks had loaded the bases.

Bump Hadley held the A's to seven hits in the nightcap, one of them Finney's second homer of the day. This was a hit inside the park in the ninth.

$25,000 Race Is Annexed By 'Biscuit

Mystery Clouds Defeat of Ligaroti; Jockeys Are Suspended.

By the Associated Press.

Del Mar, Calif., Aug. 12.—Seabiscuit and Ligaroti met in a sensational race at a mile and an eighth here today and while the former won by a head, much mystery attended the $25,000 match.

The jockeys, George Woolf, on Seabiscuit, and Noel Richardson, aboard the South American horse, were suspended until further notice and the stewards will hold a meeting tomorrow morning.

The stewards ruled the race official, with a new track record of 1:49. Ligaroti took a nose lead over C. S. Howard's big money winner soon after the start and was in the lead most of the way. For the last half mile both horses were under the whip, close together, near the rail.

Both jockeys went to the stand immediately after the race and it looked like Richardson complained about Woolf leg-locking him. But the stewards promptly announced that nothing would be said about it all until after tomorrow's hearing.

Seabiscuit, 5-year-old son of Hardtack, takes the $25,000 to add to his past winnings for a total of $319,205, but it was no great victory over the 6-year-old South American horse. Last February Seabiscuit was 45 lengths ahead of Ligarto and in July went 6½ lengths ahead.

Twenty thousand cheering spectators, 5,000 more than the previous record crowd at the track here, found intense satisfaction in the result. There was no public money wagered.

Bing Crosby and his partner, Lin Howard, polo-playing son of Seabiscuit's owner, still believe they have what Hollywood likes to call a national sensation in the 6-year-old son of Fogan-Lirica. Ligaroti carried 115 pounds, while Seabiscuit carried 130.

Snead Paces Golf Leaders

$19,412.83 Winnings Are Tops for Pros.

New York, Aug. 12 (U.P.).—Sammy Snead, the hard-hitting West Virginian playing his second year of big-time golf, is far out in front of the 1938 money winners, the Professional Golfers' Association announced tonight.

Since January 1, through August 10, Snead has won $19,412.83 despite the fact that he hasn't finished first in a national tournament. The best Sammy's done was to finish second to Paul Runyan in the recent P. G. A. championship.

Johnny Revolta, recent winner of the St. Paul open championship, is second to Snead with $6,878.33 while in third place is Harry Cooper, who topped the 1937 circuit with a total of $14,138.69. Cooper has won $6,200.08.

Henry Picard, Hershey, Pa., is fourth with $5,392.67; Runyan is fifth with $5,068.16, and Ralph Guldahl, U. S. Open winner this year and last, is sixth with $4,905.

Association Head Fines Two Pilots

Columbus, Ohio, Aug. 12 (AP).—George M. Trautman, president of the American Association, today fined Manager Bill Meyer, of the Kansas City Blues, $25, and Manager Fred Haney, of the Toledo Mud Hens, $10.

Myer was penalized for a vigorous protest against a decision of Umpire Paul Genshlea in a game against Minneapolis last Monday. When he was ejected, a shower of pop bottles delayed play for 13 minutes.

Haney was fined for not leaving the park promptly when ordered out by Umpire Buck Slavin after he protested a called ball in Wednesday night's game in Columbus.

Don Meade Wins Reinstatement

Jacksonville, Fla., Aug. 12 (AP).—The Florida Racing Commission today reinstated Don Meade, top-notch jockey, who was suspended on March 4, 1936, for betting on horses which ran against his own mount.

Meade's reinstatement becomes effective December 19, 1938, which is the opening date for Tropical Park at Coral Gables, Fla.

The commission recently declined to grant Meade's petition for reinstatement despite his promise to observe all rules of horse racing.

Meade told the commission he was "broke" and needed a job.

New York, Aug. 12.—Nine 3-year-olds, including all of the best ones still in training, race for the richest purse on tomorrow's national turf program when they tangle in the sixty-ninth running of the $20,000 Travers at Saratoga.

The mile and a quarter of America's oldest stake finds Maxwell Howard's Stagehand, the 3-to-1 favorite, although he has won only one race since beating Seabiscuit in the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap last winter. The Earl Sande-trained colt has been asked to carry 127 pounds, the same weight assigned W. S. Kilmer's Nedayr, winner of the Arlington Classic in which Stagehand finished a fast-closing third.

The classic was run over a muddy track and given a fast racing strip, Stagehand is expected to reverse the decision tomorrow. Also rated in the thick of the fight are Mrs. Parker Corning's Thanksgiving, in with 117 pounds; Warren Wright's Bull Lea, second in the classic; the ever dangerous Fighting Fox from William Woodward's Belair Stud, and Stormscud, a running mate of the Fox, from Mrs. H. C. Phipps' Wheatley Stable.

Mrs. Kilmer's Lucky Omen, a distance running colt; Townsend B. Martin's Cravat, and Walter M. Jeffords' Jolly Tar, complete the field.

Washington Park again offers two $2,500 stakes, one for 2-year-olds and the other for older horses.

The six-furlong juvenile feature, known as the Prairie Stakes, has drawn a field of 13 with the King Ranch's Ciencia the probable choice over Range Dust, Light Spur and Hello Cap.

Sixteen have been nominated in the Lakeside Handicap of one mile. J. B. Respess' Main Man is top weight at 122 pounds and figures to be in the running, with Tunica, Bow and Arrow, Marie and Sir Jim James.

later the Nats have only Rick Ferrell to show for that trade.

Rick, after a poor season with the Nats last year, has justified his end of the deal. But the Washington club has taken a terrific beating on every other angle of the trade. While the Nats are suffering from a shortage of outfield talent, Chapman is playing brilliant ball for the Red Sox, and Alamada, traded to the Browns because he couldn't hit, has hit in 27 straight games and boosted his average to .321, higher than that of any Washington outfielder.

And the Nats, suffering similarly from a shortage of pitchers, gave up in Newsom a fellow who has been able to win 11 games this season with the last-place Browns. Anyway you look at it, the Nats took a lacing on that deal.

Corn Advances Sharply With Export Sales

Wheat Rallies With Corn After Falling to New Low Prices.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 12.—Outbursts of buying of corn futures for exporters ran the corn market up 1⅝ cents late today, and virtually overcame 1⅝ cents tumbles of wheat.

Previous to rallying with corn, all future deliveries of wheat here fell to new 5-year low-price records, owing largely to abrupt breaks in Winnipeg quotations and to inferences in some quartres that the latest official Canadian wheat crop report, although containing no definite forecast, suggested a harvest 70,000,000 bushels more than recent current private estimates.

Prospects of dry hot weather in the corn belt, an outlook less favorable than of late for the corn crop, added to the upward impetus of corn values. There were also indications of a larger export shipping business in corn today than yesterday.

At the close, Chicago corn futures were ⅝ to 1½ cents higher compared with yesterday's finish, September, 51¼; December, 48 to 48⅜, wheat, ⅜ to ⅛ up; September, 62 to 62⅛; December, 64¼ to 64⅜, oats unchanged to ⅜ down, rye showing ⅛ to 1 cent bulge, and provisions varying from 7 cents setback to 27 cents advance.

Australian Air Line Orders 2 Lockheeds

Los Angeles, Aug. 12.—Decision to speed up air mail and air travel in northwestern Australia, by the addition of two fast American-built transports, was revealed today in the announcement by the Lockheed Aircraft Corporation that MacRobertson-Miller Aviation Corporation, Ltd., of Perth, had ordered two ten-passenger "Electra" airliners at a cost of $117,000.

The planes, similar to those in operation on many airlines in the United States, will have a top speed of 210 miles per hour and will cruise with full load at 195 miles per hour.

Cotton Reacts To Low Level

New York, Aug. 12 (AP).—Cotton today sold back to the low levels touched after the crop report was issued last Monday under increased liquidation. December declined from 8.35 to 8.23 and closed at 8.24, with final prices 16 to 19 points lower.

The market opened 6 to 9 points lower in response to foreign markets and under selling from abroad. Commission houses and local offerings appeared as clear weather was reported from areas recently complaining of weevil activity and easiness of the stock and grain markets also had a depressing influence. A little resistance was encountered in the form of trade buying and covering as prices eased to levels which the trade believed might make a Government cotton loan mandatory.

Cottonseed Oil.

Cottonseed oil, despite a favorable July consumption report, was easy today under liquidation promoted by weakness of lard, crude oil and some grains. A late recovery in lard attracted some support at losses of 21 to 24 points, and the market closed 13 to 18 points net lower.

Relief Is 14% Of Government Total Expense

Federal, State and Local Relief Outlay Was $2,323,755,500.

New York, Aug. 12.—In its weekly summary of the general business situation the Standard Statistics Co. says today:

"Statistics covering all forms of public relief expenditures—Federal, State and local— but excluding transient care and administrative expenses, show that $2,323,755,000 was expended in 1937. As the total cost of Government in that year is estimated at $17,000,000,000, it is seen that expenditures for relief payments accounted for at least 14 per cent of all Federal, State and local expenses. And with the present heavy load (relief expenses are running around $250,000,000 monthly), outlays for relief are now accounting for at least 17 per cent of the cost of Government.

Estimates Difficult.

"Recent reports to the effect that the States and Federal Government have laid out $22,000,000,000 in emergency spending since 1932 give only a partial indication of the vast sums that have been expended to provide relief and promote recovery. What the actual cost has been no one knows, nor can it be estimated with any degree of accuracy. All that can be said is that the accountable expenditures of Federal and State governments represent only the minimum.

"Of the $22,000,000,000 estimated to have been spent since 1932, $16,647,000,000 has been contributed by the Federal Government, based on Treasury figures through July 1. The remaining $5,100,000,000 is probably a less reliable estimate but is the figure arrived at for State expenditures by the Senate committee which investigated the unemployment situation earlier in the year.

"Included in the total are the outlays for construction, road building, conservation, education, transportation, electrification, reclamation and many miscellaneous projects, as well as the funds expended for direct relief. All of these date from mid-1932, when the RFC was authorized to lend $300,000,000 to the States for relief purposes."

Gold Importations Highest in Month

Gold imports rose last week to $21,098,816, the highest in four weeks. The Commerce Department said yesterday that shipments included $3,840,000 from Sweden, $4,860,258 from England, $4,043,288 from Canada, $1,708,315 from Mexico and $5,874,820 from Japan.

Silver imports slumped from the usual $5,000,000 a week to $1,386,381 last week, including $636,459 from Mexico and $440,280 from Canada.

Prices Break as European Apprehensions Overcome Domestic Developments.

New York, Aug. 12.—Another sharp break in the stock market made it five in a row for the bearish forces. Stocks started the day uncertainly, broke sharply in the second hour at which time the ticker was forced three minutes late, and then backed and filled for the balance of the session without displaying any convincing rallying power. The composite showed an average decline of 0.94 point and the volume of 1,479,690 shares was the greatest since July 27.

Foreign influences formed the most important factor in today's unsettlement. Up until this time the stock market may be said to have paid comparatively little attention to the threat of a spread of Nazi influence into Czechoslovakia. The war scare caused by the rush of Germany's armament program and the clashes between Japanese and Russian troops. But not so the foreign exchange market, where one wave of gloom has followed the previous wave of gloom with the regularity of the sunrise. Now it appears that feeling of apprehension has penetrated to the stock market, offsetting with its effect the comparatively favorable reports of domestic busines.

President's Purge.

There was some inclination in the Street to blame the day's break on the renewal by the President of his attempt to purge the next Congress of those Democrats whom he does not regard as loyal. The attack upon Senator George, of Georgia, was regarded as particularly vitrolic, but as unwise as this outburst may have been politically, it does not appear likely that it had much influence in financial quarters. For when the President was on his way west for his Pacific fishing trip he was fully as bitter in his speeches regarding those Democrats who had refused to give him doglike devotion, yet the stock market was strong. As far as politics is concerned, the domestic offering is ineffective at the moment, but the international political situations are making themselves felt in an ominous manner.

Motors in Supply.

The nervous selling in our stock market carried prices of the leaders off 1 to 3 points and in a few individual cases the losses were 5 to 7 points. Despite the bullish news from the motor industry recently, the motors were selected for particular attention by the sellers. General Motors was the most active stock of the day and closed off ¾, while Chrysler was down 2, Yellow Truck nearly a point and Studebaker a fraction. Tire stocks followed the motors, United States Rubber selling off 1¼ and Goodrich nearly as much. Aviation issues made a show of firmness and their losses generally were small, while Bendix just managed to show a plus sign. Even the gold stocks, which have had their strong days while the rush continues in London for the coveted metal, joined in the general trend today.

Declines of around 1 to 2 points were sustained by such leaders as American Smelting, Telephone, Anaconda, Bethlehem, Du Pont, Harvester, Manville, Loews, Nickel Plate, Jersey, Union Pacific, Steel and Westinghouse. Pressure continued against Delaware & Hudson and New York Central, losses being about a point.

The grain market was saved from a bad day by buying of corn for export, which pushed the price up 1⅝ cents and turned wheat from new five year lows back to a level little changed from Thursday. Corn closed up ⅝ to 1½, and wheat was ⅜ off to ⅛ up. Cotton broke 16 to 19 points, reflecting the lower foreign markets and better weather in weevil infested areas.

Bonds Yield to Pressure.

Listed bonds were dull today, with high grade money market issues off by small fractions, while the more speculative issues showed losses to 4 points. Only a few foreign bonds escaped the downward pressure that developed in senior securities, just as it did in equities. War rumors and political dissension here discouraged holders and the liquidation canceled a good part of the recent advance. Turnover was only $5,480,000.

Secondary rail liens were lowered steadily, throughout the session. Medium-priced interest payers were hardest hit, but the cheaper borderline system bonds also were heavy. Default rails continued to drift lower. Holding company, amusement, communications and other special groups moved downhill. Local tractions showed a few gains sprinkled among the losses.

Czech bonds were not traded, but other European issues were fairly steady, regardless of debt service standing. Canadian and Australian obligations were in excellent demand, but Argentines dipped slightly, probably in preparation for the new financing of next week. Latin-American default bonds were irregular. The Japanese group showed further small gains.

United States Treasury bonds were marked down by small fractions, with dealings small. Guaranteed issues of the farm and home corporations also were soft. One of the American Telephone 3⅛s moved to a new high in the corporate section, but money market bonds in general tended to drift slightly lower. Bankers reported excellent results on the New York steam offering.

Tobacco Markets.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, Md., Aug. 12.—Leaf tobacco: Maryland—Receipts, 2,854 hhds. and sales, 1,470 hhds., are the figures for the last week. The demand and prices continued as before, while the quality of the offerings is gradually showing a slight improvement.

Ohio—No receipts, sales, 2 hhds.

Crop prospects, Maryland—During the last two weeks there was too much rain and sultry weather in most of the tobacco growing districts. This has caused rust or wild fire to damage some early fields, particularly in Charles County, where considerable tobacco was also drowned out by the heavy rains. Probably 10 per cent or more of this crop has already been cut and housed. Farmers are hoping for fair weather to continue housing.

Maryland—1937 crop: Firm leaf, nondescript, 3.00@5.00; common, 5.00@12.00; medium, 13.00@30.00; good to fine red, 31.00@40.00; seconds, common, 4.00@10.00; medium, 11.00@20.00; good to fine, 21.00@35.00.

European Capital Rushes Into Gold

New York, Aug. 12 (AP).—European capital, chilled by new European war fears, made a headlong dash for the warmth of gold and the dollar today, and the British pound and French franc plunged again into new low ground for the year.

Especially upsetting to money men were reports of German troop movement near the Czechoslovak border, although also in the background were persistently circulating rumors of revision in the 1936 money agreement between Britain, America and France.

The pound, which lost 7-16 of a cent during the day, is now less than a cent away from the old gold dollar ration of $4.867. Heavy turnover was reported in the London open market as the price soared to the highest level since November, 1936. With the equivalent price at $34.78, or just about at the "gold point," further engagements of gold abroad for shipment here were reported by the Federal Reserve Bank.

Jerome N. Frank Gets $6,000 More From ICC

The Interstate Commerce Commission increased by $6,000 yesterday the compensation of Jerome N. Frank for his services as special counsel in the Missouri Pacific Railroad reorganization proceedings. In an order July 8, the I. C. C. fixed $16,000 as Frank's maximum final allowance, this was in addition to an earlier allowance of $16,000.

Frank, who now is a member of the Securities Commission, asked reconsideration, asserting the total approved compensation was "wholly inadequate, in view of the time devoted to the services, the skill and ability required and displayed, the importance of the work." In its order today the commission increase made the maximum final allowance $22,000.

Chain Store Sales Pick Up in July

Volume as measured by the trade publication's index advanced to 108.2 of the 1929-31 average for July, taken as 100, compared with the revised figure of 106.3 in June, and 114.5 in July, 1937.

They will be 91-day bills; and will be sold on a discount basis to the highest bidders. Tenders will be received at the Federal Reserve banks or branches up to 2 p. m. on Monday. Tenders will not be received at the Treasury Department.

New York, Aug. 12 (AP).—The price of scrap copper was reduced ¼ cent today to 8½ cents a pound. Dealers reported the cut was in line with a drop in the export copper quotation to around 10.07 cents from yesterday's range of 10.29-10.35 cents.

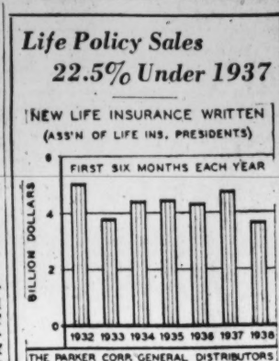
Life Policy Sales 22.5% Under 1937



Boston, Aug. 12.—New life insurance written in the first six months of this year dropped from the corresponding months of last year by 22½ per cent. This is a natural result of the business slump. In June, this year, the average ordinary life policy written was for $2,200 compared with $2,130 a year ago.

Prince Georges Democrat Slate Ready Tuesday

Few Key Choices Remain to Be Made, Sasscer Announces.

Prince Georges County's complete list of Democratic candidates for county offices will be announced Tuesday, it was said yesterday by State Senator Lansdale G. Sasscer, county political leader.

Candidates would have been announced earlier, it was believed, except for disagreement as to who was to fill a few key offices, one of which is the office to be vacated by Senator Sasscer himself, who is a candidate for governor.

Three persons are seeking the senatorship—L. Harold Sothoron, Charles Marbury and Kent Mullikin, all now delegates to the lower Maryland house. It is believed that Marbury, majority leader in the House of Delegates, will get the indorsement of his party leaders for the senatorship.

Bowie Sure to Run.

It is a foregone conclusion that Brice Bowie, clerk of the circuit court, will be a candidate to succeed himself. The two judges of the circuit court up for re-election, Joseph C. Mattingly and William Loker, are almost certain of appearing on the slate with the backing of the county leaders.

The circuit judgeship is not a strictly county office since the two judges and Judge Walter Mitchell together serve the counties of Prince Georges, Charles, Calvert and St. Marys.

Candidates for these offices will be announced definitely early next week, said Senator Sasscer, together with six candidates for the House of Delegates, a surveyor, five county commissioners, a register of wills, three judges of the Orphans Court, a sheriff, a State's attorney, a treasurer, and six members of the county State central committee.

Republicans Tardy.

Although the Democrats as yet have no slate in the field, the Republicans are but little more advanced. A meeting in Marlboro Tuesday night, expected to result in the choosing of a county slate, got no further than the selection of seven candidates for the Republican county State central committee.

However, the deadline for filing of candidacies is still two weeks off, primaries will be held September 12.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart.

The Federal Diary award for "the best Government publication of the year" is herewith tendered Charles E. Randall and D. Pricilla Edgerton, of the division of information and education, Forest Service, for their joint work, "Famous Trees."

The booklet, just off the GPO presses, was several years in preparation. Of course, they could not give it their full time—but it would seem that they had. Their love of the subject probably accounts for the competence and excellence of the work.

They have done something, it seemed to this column, that needed to be done. The booklet doesn't go into the technical aspects of trees, but rather into the human interest side of them. We've never thought that many people were interested in the Latin names of trees, or the peculiarities of bark and foliage.

Most people, we think, regard all trees romantically. They pass by a venerable oak or elm and, if they are imaginative at all, ponder for a moment, at least, on the people famous or otherwise whose eyes have fixed on the tree and who may have sought its shade or its companionship. They ponder on what incidents, tremendous or trivial, have occurred nearby.

Every venerable tree seems associated with something; maybe a ponderous and ineffective treaty was signed in its shade, or maybe it was the station only for lovers. The authors of "Famous Trees" seem to have been in this frame of mind. The booklet is given almost entirely to "trees that were associated with notable persons, events and places." Trees in Washington, D. C., are numerous in the mention.

The writing is concise—and, seizing at random, we find:

"Treaty Oak, in the old Dean estate on Temple Heights, at the intersection of Florida and Connecticut avenues. Under this tree Chief Mannacasset, of the Anacostian Indian Tribe, had his wigwam and negotiated many treaties with other tribes and with the white men.

"Tradition has it that among the many captives taken by Mannacasset were a young mother and her daughter. The chief spared their lives, but sent forth a decree that under penalty of death the woman must not wander beyond the shade of the oak which overspread the hut in which she lived.

Shortly after the death of Mannacasset the treaty for the purchase from the Indians of the site, which is now within the National Capital, was signed beneath the branches of this majestic oak. Several homes were offered the captive, but she preferred to remain beneath the shelter of the sturdy oak. In appreciation of her sufferings, a tract of ground 171½ acres in exent was assigned to her as 'The Widow's Mite,' and to this day, this property (including also several blocks adjacent) traces its deeds to the 'Widow's Mite.'"

The famous trees of practically every State are included in the booklet whose interest grows on you.

Among the people you know, or would be interested in, is:

FRENCH M. HYRE—

He is the gentleman who assisted J. D. Lawrence in a recently important FCA survey and who keeps the X-rays of 16,000 farmer co-operatives and mutual companies. Hyre, Cornell trained, is now agricultural economist in the FCA Co-operative Division.

Hyre came to the Farm Credit Administration in 1935, after taking an M.S. degree in agricultural economics at Cornell and serving for a year with the Department of Agriculture. Prior to this, he was on the staff of the Rhode Island State College of Agriculture.

Eight years ago when the old Federal Farm Board was organized and authorized to assist in the development of farmer co-operatives, Hyre—who comes from Frenchton, W. Va.—was selected to assist in a survey of farmers' co-ops in the 13 Northeastern States and assigned to collect data on West Virginia and Virginia co-operatives. In analyzing the records of 100 farmer-owned associations in the two Virginias, Hyre worked up an appetite for co-operation which he hasn't satisfied as yet.

He thinks farmer co-ops across the Potomac have shown remarkable progress during the past eight years.

"Anyone who saw Virginia and West Virginia co-operatives in 1930," he says, "and then revisited them after eight years would see changes and growth of almost Rip Van Winkle proportions."

The number of co-ops in Virginia has increased from 79 to 129 and the gross business from $15,000,000 to more than $22,000,000. Farmer co-ops in the Old Dominion have a membership of nearly 50,000. Producers in these associations are co-operatively selling every type of farm crop from tobacco to spinach—and the list of livestock products sold co-operatively runs from beef steer to rabbits.

Hyre, who makes his home in Takoma Park, is married, and last week became the proud father of a nine-pound boy, who arrived at Columbia Hospital.

The though occurs that no matter how much civil service is put in the well-run National Archives here, it won't do any good. For of all the Government agencies in town, Archives is perhaps the No. 1 training ground for bright young men and women. The training they receive there is recognized in institutions all over the country. And experience shows that as soon as they win their spurs, private occupation calls them with fine opportunity. The turn-over, for this reason, is great. Civil service won't hold them down there. They're needed elsewhere—and we think it a pretty good thing.

Bob Burns Says—

In every town, you'll find some fella who knows all the landmarks, the old twisted oak, the rock with a face on it, and he can use these to tell a stranger exactly where to find any place he's lookin' for. My Uncle Orky is that way.

I was standin' on the corner talkin' to him last summer when a stranger walks up and says, "Neighbor, can you tell me how to get to the Hoskins place?" and Uncle Orky says, "Sure, stranger, you go down the road seven shaving cream ads and two cigarette posters, then turn right at the tooth paste ad and drive past four soft-drink signs and you'll find the Hoskins place right behind the big hotel billboard."

NEC's Report on Economic Conditions in the South

Section I.
Economic Resources.

The South presents the paradox of poverty amid plentiful resources. Despite the richness of its soil, forests and minerals, the 36,000,000 people of its 13 States are the poorest sectional group of the country. Lacking industry, it has been forced to sell its products for manufacture elsewhere and, being forced to pay the differential between the price of its raw products and its finished requirements, it has remained the victim of economic lag.

It has become the principal labor reservoir of the Nation. Its birth rate exceeds that of any other region, and yet it cannot offer work to its increasing population, which in ever larger numbers is seeking work elsewhere.

It is linked by a network of railroads and rivers, and across the Gulf of Mexico it has easy access to the Caribbean and South America.

With seven major soil types, it can produce a wide variety of farm products. It has 200,000,000 acres of woodland, and its pine forests lead the world in production of naval stores. It has a stand of 20,000,000 cattle, but they are poor in quality and the annual production is worth only one-sixth of the national income from cattle, although in bulk it is one-third. It has a fifth of the Nation's soft coal and mines a tenth of its iron ore, but it smelts only 7 per cent of its pig iron.

The South has 27 per cent of the Nation's hydro-electric capacity, but it produces only 21 per cent of the hydro-electric power actually generated in the country. It produces nearly two-thirds of the Nation's crude oil and more than two-thirds of its natural gas, but it has no facilities for utilizing these fuels in home manufacture.

Section II.
Soil.

Although the South was originally blessed with some of the Nation's best soil, the report states, it has suffered from the curse of tenant farming and from its almost exclusive devotion to inter-tilled crops—cotton, corn and tobacco. The result is that 61 per cent of the soil ruined by erosion in the United States is Southern soil. The South, with one-fifth of the Nation's income, pays three-fifths of its fertilizer bill. It spends annually more on fertilizer to repair worn-out land than it does on all of its land-grant colleges, experiment stations and extension workers. And all this in a hopeless effort to reverse a process of nature which the Southern farmer has allowed to go too far through ignorance of modern farming methods or from the tenant's sheer indifference. Each year 27,500,000 tons of nitrogen and phosphorus compounds are washed down Southern rivers to the sea from eroded lands, an annual loss of $300,000,000 in good topsoil, a loss of irreplaceable capital.

Section III.
Water.

In water resources the South has had an over-abundance rather than a scarcity of water for crop production, yet many of its older cities and towns have risen on the Piedmont plateau, where ground waters are meager, and where cities have had to depend upon wells and dwindling rivers for their water supplies. The depletion of such streams and their resultant increased pollution has impaired public health.

In the coastal plains the problem of water supply has been one of over-abundance. It has been necessary to reclaim the "wet lands" by drainage, a work retarded by the malaria which it helps to check. In many sections of the South uncontrolled flood waters have brought tremendous economic loss to a zone which is suffering today from the agricultural sins of the past.

The once rich fisheries which arose on the Southern rivers are being depleted, and there has been no development of recreational and wildlife facilities to compensate for them. These rivers in their fall from the Piedmont plateau are a rich source of electric power, but they have been developed to only one-fifth of their potential production.

Section IV.
Population.

The population of the South is growing more rapidly by natural increase than that of any other region. Its excess of births over deaths is 10 per 1,000 as compared with 7 per 1,000 annually, and already it has the most thickly populated rural area in the United States. Yet a steady migration is taking from the South many of its best people. Of the 28,700,000 Southerners born in rural areas only 17,500,000 live in the locality where they were born, and 3,800,000 left the South entirely.

The largely rural States of the South must support more than a third of their population in school, while the industrial States support less than one-fourth. Moreover, in the search for jobs the productive middle-age groups leave the South in the greatest numbers, tending to make the South a land of the very old and the very young.

Increasing competition has upset the balance between white and colored. Unemployment has forced many whites to seek occupations traditionally filled by colored, with the result that the field for the colored man has been restricted and his migrations increased.

Section V.
Private and Public Income.

The failure of the South to develop a balanced economy has made the incomes of its people the lowest in the Nation. Even in "prosperous" 1929, the report says, Southern farm people received an average gross income of only $186 a year as compared to $528 for farmers elsewhere in the Union. For more than half of the South's farm families—the 53 per cent who are tenants—incomes are far lower. The income of tenant farm workers in some instances is as low as 10 cents a day and nowhere in the South does the average annual tenant income exceed $73 per person.

Despite these conditions the Southern States have loaded the tax burden on those least able to pay, by the use of sales taxes. In every Southern State, but one, 59 per cent of the revenue is raised by such imposts.

Section VI.
Education.

Poverty has left its imprint upon the people of the South in reduced levels of health and education. In the rural regions there is a marked disparity between the number of children to be educated and the means for doing it. In 1930 the rural inhabitants of the South had to educate 4,250,000 on an income only 2 per cent of the Nation's total. By contrast that year the nonfarm population of the Northeast had 21 times the income for twice as many children. The number of schools is fewer, they are less accessible, teachers are poorly paid, and the illiteracy rate, as a result, is higher. In 1930 the North Central States had an illiteracy percentage of 1.9. Every State in the South, except Oklahoma, had a percentage higher than 6.5.

Section VII.
Health.

The low-income belt of the South is a belt of sickness, misery and unnecessary death. Malaria, which infects more than 2,000,000 persons annually, is estimated to have reduced the South's industrial production one-third. The United States Public Health Service has found the ravages of syphilis high among the poor whites and higher among the Negroes, whose poverty is even greater. The South's climate is not unhealthful, the prevalence of sickness being due instead to poverty and indifference. Health-protection facilities in the region are limited. The South is deficient in hospitals, doctors and clinics. In South Carolina there are only one-third as many doctors, in proportion to population, as in California. In industrial hygiene the South had been woefully deficient until the intrusion in 1936 of Social Security Board funds for such work.

Section VIII.
Housing.

In housing the low income level of the South has made itself apparent both on farms and in the cities. In many Southern towns the slum is simply a convenient rental quarter for cheap labor, built for the purpose. Impure water supplies are common in such quarters, and in many there is no supply other than a few common yard faucets or surface wells, often contaminated by sewage or refuse. Nearly a fifth of Southern farm homes have no toilets in a region where hookworm and consequent anemia flourish as a result of soil pollution. In Southern cities overcrowding is a major evil. In one-eighth of the dwellings there are more than 1½ persons to the room, in contrast to the country as a whole, in which only one-fourteenth of town houses are thus crowded. There are at least 2,500,000 substandard houses in the South. More than half of the farm houses are unpainted and more than one-third do not have screens to keep out the mosquitoes and flies which spread disease. By the most conservative estimate 4,000,000, or more than half of all families in the South, should be rehoused.

Section IX.
Labor.

The South has need of many things, but it cannot buy them because it lacks the purchasing power. Low wages have helped industry little in the South. Not only have they curtailed purchasing power, on which local commerce is dependent, but they have made it possible for inefficient industries to survive. They also have brought about the formation of an unstable labor population, since the Southern worker, both on the farm and in the city, has no surplus to accumulate the property which tends to keep people stable. In 1937, the pay in the cotton goods industry for skilled work averaged about 12 cents an hour less than the pay for similar work elsewhere. Similar differentials existed between the South and other regions in lumber, furniture, iron and steel, coal mining and in industry generally. Annual wages show the same discrepancy. The average yearly pay per person in the South in 1935 was $865.41, as compared to $1,219.31 for the remainder of the country.

Section X.
Women and Children.

The use of child labor, in which the South leads the Nation, has tended further to depress wage scales and increase the poverty of the adult worker. One hundred and eight of every 1,000 children in the South from 10 to 15 years of age are employed gainfully as against 47 out of 1,000 for the country as a whole. Only North and South Carolina have established 16-year minimums for employment in industrial work. Texas has a 15-year factory minimum, and the remaining ten States have age minimums of 14, but in eight of these there are many exemptions permissible. As a result school attendance in the South has been reduced four points below the Nation as a whole.

The labor of women is another factor depressing wages. Many women work 50 hours a week in Southern factories, and only one of the Southern States has established an eight-hour day for women in any industry. Only four have set up an industrial work week of 48 hours for women. In all the Southern States women's wages ordinarily amount to less than men's.

Section XI.
Ownership and Use of Land.

The farming South depends on cotton and tobacco for two-thirds of its cash income. Half of the farmers depend on cotton alone. They are one-crop farmers, subjected year after year to risks which would appall the average business man. No similar area in the world gambles the destiny of its people on a single crop market year after year.

The gamble is not a good one. Few other crops are subject to such various and unpredictable price fluctuations as cotton. In 1927 cotton farmers received 20 cents a pound for their crop; in 1929, 16 cents; in 1931, 6 cents; in 1933, 10 cents. Only once during the last decade has the price of cotton changed less than 10 per cent between pickings. Three times in five years it has jumped more than 40 per cent—once up and twice down.

Because in many parts of the South cotton is the cornerstone of the community's economy, the banker, merchant and professional man share the hazards of the farmer. The men who finance the cotton crop charge high interest rates because their loans are subject to great risks. As a result the mortgage debt on Southern farms has been growing steadily for 20 years.

This process has forced more than half of the South's farmers into tenant status—tilling land they do not own. White and colored have shared alike. Of 1,831,000 tenant families in the region 66 per cent are white. Living from crop to crop, the tenant has no incentive to guard the soil resources, to sow cover crops or keep buildings in repair. He permits erosion to go unchecked in many cases, and meanwhile, although he is raising more than he can sell of tobacco and cotton, he grows only one-fifth of the things he needs to use; four-fifths of all he eats and wears is purchased.

Section XII.
Credit.

The poverty of the South becomes readily apparent in a study of its banking position. Although the region contains 28 per cent of the Nation's population, in 1937 its banks held less than 11 per cent of Nation's bank deposits, or $150 per capita, compared with $471 per capita for the Nation elsewhere. The bulk of the South's capital is derived not from its own poverty-stricken millions, but from outside sources. The South has continually been forced to borrow and further impoverish herself by paying tribute to outsiders in the form of interest and dividends.

Insurance company funds reflect the same condition. Southern companies hold only $756,000,000, or 2.6 per cent of the $28,418,000,000 held by the Nation's life insurance companies.

The South's necessity for borrowing has often forced its entrepreneurs, both in small and large industry, to turn the destiny of Southern enterprises over to outside management whose other interests have often led it to policies against the South's best interest.

The scarcity of credit, and the risk of loans on a one-crop economy have made interest rates extremely high in many parts of the South. Local banks cannot meet credit demands because their scant deposits are largest after harvest and smallest in the spring and summer, just at the time when the need for farm and crop financing is greatest. As a result many Southern farmers have been unable to operate on a cash basis and have been forced to adopt a barter system to furnish seed, fertilizer and food to their tenants. The tenant gives a lien on his crop as security; but if the crop is short he may find himself in debt at the end of the season, even though the landlord has charged him a fair rate of interest. The landlord's credit difficulties are as great as his tenants'. He usually stakes everything on a single cash crop and, because of the resultant insecurity of his loan, must pay rates of as high as 20 per cent.

Section XIII.
Use of Natural Resources.

The story of the South's natural resources is a story of absentee ownership which has exploited them with typical American regard for cream and disregard for skimmed milk.

Public utilities in the South are almost completely controlled by outside interests. All of the major railroads are owned or controlled elsewhere. The power development and operating companies, the natural gas wells, the rich fields of coal, iron ore, bauxite and limestone, all are controlled from without the region.

For the use of its iron, coal, sulphur, zinc and aluminum ores the South receives little but the pay of unskilled or semi-skilled labor. The wages for manufacturing these raw products into useful articles usually go not to Southerners but to outside workers. On the other hand when a Southerner buys the product he must pay for all the wasteful cross-hauling involved in the process.

The processing of cotton has of late became a major Southern industry, bringing work to Southern hands. And yet the dividends of ownership even here are carried out of the region, for the mills are to a large extent owned in the North.

The manufacture of cellulose from cotton waste and wood chips into rayon presents a striking example of such absentee control and profits. The American Bemberg Co., with large mills in Tennessee, uses patents and processes exclusively owned in Germany. Of the company's directors, five are Germans, three are Dutch and four are Americans resident in New York.

Section XIV.
Industry.

Southern industry, long hindered by the lack of railroads and skilled labor has removed those difficulties and now faces another and made-made wall raised against its products, freight rate differentials.

With respect to the manufacture of cotton textiles the South has come to a dominating position, and earnings on its mills, as indicated by the figures for 1933-34 are higher than those in the North, although the wages paid its workers are lower. The processing of another element in its chief crop — cottonseed — has also aided Southern economy. In 1929 the value of its cottonseed products to the South was more than $130,000,000.

In North Carolina and Virginia cigarette manufacture, and in Alabama iron manufacture are important. The pulp paper industry is growing, with 20 new mills contracted for in 1938.

But the problem which faces all industry in the South is that of freight rate differentials. The northeastern region, containing 51 per cent of the country's population, is its greatest consuming area, and the Southern manufacturer sending goods across the freight-rate boundary into it must pay a difference of 39 per cent in the charges for haulage compared with shipments originating in the East. The Southwestern manufacturer, with a 75 per cent relative disadvantage, is even worse off.

On one hand freight rates have hampered Southern industry; on the other high tariffs have subsidized industry in other sections of the country at the expense of the South. The South as a result has been squeezed to the point where its purchasing power is too low for it to be an adequate market for its own wares or for the remainder of the country.

Section XV.
Purchasing Power.

The South's people want and need houses, radios, butter, beef, vegetables, milk, eggs, dresses, shirts, shoes. They need many things, and would buy them if they had the money.

The average Southerner, with a total annual income of $315, could spend twice that amount, without help, for the things he needs and needs badly. Such spending would help both the South and the remainder of the Nation; that it does not exist has been harmful to both.

Southern people need washing machines, vacuum cleaners, electric irons, clothing, new houses. They need to consume more basic foodstuffs. The South is the Nation's greatest untapped market, but some means must be found to provide it with purchasing power.

Northern producers and distributors are losing profits and Northern workers are idle because the South has no money with which to buy its own goods let alone those from outside.
